Kennedy Holdup Suspect Held In $50,000

Allegedly identified as a member of the bandit gang which robbed Mrs. William J. Kennedy of $128,000 worth of jewels, Samuel Linden, 37, of West Newton street, Boston, was held in $50,000 in Westboro district court today.

Judge Francis X. Reilly postponed hearing of the case until Jan. 20, over protest of the defendant's council.

Attorney Harold Aaronfsky, representing the man, pleaded with the court that his client was a victim of police persecution and had been held for three days without arraignment.

LOSES HIS PLEA

"Just because this man has a prison record," he said, "Boston police and state police have been picking him up two or three times a week and grilling him on general principles. He knows nothing of this robbery."

Attorney Aaronofsky demanded that the state present its evidence against Linden immediately.

He was overruled by Judge Reilly, who set bail at half the sum asked by State Detective Edward J. McCarthy, who appeared as complainant.

McCarthy said he thought $100,000 would not be excessive.

Judge Reilly found probable

POPE ASKS WORLD TO PRAY FOR PEACE

Vatican City, Jan. 9 (AP)—Pope Pius, improved but still afflicted with a variety of old age ills, sent this message today to the forthcoming Eucharistic Congress in Manila:

"Pray for the re-establishment of peace in a world which needs it badly."

The Pontiff's statement was delivered to the papal mission, headed by Dennis Cardinal Dougherty of Philadelphia, by Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state.

Cardinal Dougherty was also presented with the Holy Father's gift to the congress—a gold and silver casket.

The mission was received by Cardinal Pacelli in his Vatican offices on behalf of the 79-year-old Pope whose condition was reported "unchanged."

"I feel much better today than recently," the Pope told Cardinal Tisserant this afternoon.

"I cannot restrain my desire to compliment you on how well you look," the visiting cardinal said.

Pope Sits Up Today In Wheeled Bed-Chair

Vatican City, Jan. 9 (INS)—In buoyant spirits after a "fairly good night," Pope Pius sat up today in his new special wheeled bed-chair and once more took up some of the lighter skeins of his pontifical duties.

The Pope, Dr. Amanti Milani indicated, may be able to occupy the chair for the duration of his illness.

Work, he feared, may cause that illness to end in death, but the doctor was satisfied that the bed-chair will not cause any undue strain on the Pontiff.

TROTZKY IN MEXICO; TROOPS GUARD EXILE

Tampico, Mexico, Jan. 9 (AP)—The tanker Ruth, bringing Leon Trotzky to a haven in Mexico, arrived in the Panuco river, near Tampico today.

Small detachments of soldiers and police guarded the docks to prevent trouble if a threatened demonstration of hostility to the exiled Bolshevist leaders should be carried out by the Tamaulipas State Labor Federation, an affiliate of the Confederation of Labor of Mexico.

A reception committee, including Senora Diego Rivera, wife of the Mexican painter, was ready to hustle Trotzky off to an unannounced destination. Senora Rivera wore an Indian costume.

It was reliable reported President Lazaro Cardenas had put an airplane and a private railway car at Trotzky's disposition.

'CURLEY MEN' REMOVED BY GOVERNOR

Joseph A. Scolponeti, long-time friend of Governor Hurley but ousted by him as general counsel to the bank commissioner, today resigned rather than accept the offer to work "in minor capacities."

Scolponeti was removed by Governor Hurley when the post of counsel to the bank commissioner was abolished. He had been in office for only a few weeks following his appointment by Governor Curley.

He succeeded Professor Frank L. Simpson to the $7200-a-year job. His salary was fixed at $5700 a year.

FRIENDSHIP THREATENED

Governor Hurley's action in offering Scolponeti a minor post which brought about the latter's resignation today threatened to disrupt a friendship of many years' standing.

Their close friendship started while both were students at Boston College high school and continued through their college days until the last election campaign.

Scolponeti was manager of the first Hurley campaign for state treasurer and was closely identified with subsequent campaigns.

During the last campaign, however, Scolponeti, always an ardent admirer of former Governor Curley, devoted most of his energies to the senatorial battle.

LAWLER ACCEPTS JOB

Roche Pays $400 Fine In Killing

Attorney Francis J. Roche of Cambridge, one time candidate for mayor of that city and son-in-law of the late Mayor Edward J. Quinn, was today found guilty of manslaughter by Judge Nelson P. Brown in Suffolk Superior Criminal court, and fined $400.

In passing sentence, Judge Brown revealed "attempts to influence the court."

The court ruled that Austin McKeough, 62, of Winthrop, a waiter on the floating night club SS Royale, died as a result of a kick administered by Roche on the early morning of June 27, 1935, following an argument over change.

McKeough died several days after being kicked. Roche was a guest aboard the boat with his wife and a friend.

Roche seemed stunned when the court clerk announced the judge's decision.

The fine was paid by Roche with a check for $200 and $200 in cash. His wife, who sat through the trial but who did not testify, was not in court.

In making his decision Judge Brown said:

"There are some aspects to this case of which counsel are aware.

"I am convinced there were attempts to influence the court in its decision and its disposition of Greater Boston and most of New England today continued to bask in the comparative balm of 50 to 60 degree temperatures.

The temperature stayed close to the 50 degree mark and only a slight drop was anticipated tonight.

Two of New England's standard cold spots—Mount Washington, N. H., and Northfield, Vt.—reported readings of 40 for the former and 60 for the latter.

Rain and possible snow is forecast for the week-end, however.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 9—Losing his balance as he tried to save his hat from a gust of wind, John Gill, 36, able seaman, plunged 45 feet to his death into the hold of the steamer Ida Hay Atwater today.

He fell from the deck into a forward hatch, landing on his head. Gill lived at 14 Morris avenue, Lynn.

Woman, 71, Dying After Crash

Struck by an automobile as she crossed the Fellsway at Myrtle street to board a street car, 71-year-old Mrs. Mary Phelan, of Spring street, Medford, was in Malden Hospital today with probably fatal injuries.

BULLETINS

Berlin, Jan. 9 (AP)—Private German sources declared today Reichsfuehrer Hitler has told Spanish Insurgent General Franco to capture Madrid by Jan. 15. They asserted Hitler has sent between 15,000 and 25,000 volunteers to the Fascist commander's aid and spent $180,000,000 to help the Insurgents. Hitler hopes to gain three objectives, these informants said, in return for participating in the "Spanish adventure." They were reported as:

Colonies, lost after the World War; Mining concessions in Spain or its possessions; economic aid from other European powers.

Paris, Jan. 9 (INS)—Evacuation of the whole civil population of Madrid virtually has been decided upon, the newspaper La Liberte reported today in a Madrid dispatch. The report said Civil Governor Luis Calbo had directed all newspapers and heads of trade unions to start a campaign urging evacuation of all persons who do not have political or military duties in the capital.

Washington, Jan. 9 (AP)—R. Walton Moore, acting secretary of state, said today the Mexican Government had renewed assurances to the United States that no war materials of American origin would be permitted to leave Mexico for Spain.

By the Associated Press

Bugles called the French Colonials of Morocco to the alert today as great turbines drove the French and British fleets to new danger zones of Spain's "Little World War."

Quiet orders that dealt with the emergency of casualty lists went out to British naval men and to the royal marines.

Morocco, powder keg of 1911; cradle of the Fascist revolution of 1936—there lay the newest menace to Europe's peace.

France put her Moroccan zone garrison in a virtual state of mobilization; sent the first units of her Atlantic fleet off Mediterranean Africa for "maneuvers;" stepped up her Moroccan army from 40,000 to 100,000; reinforced the borders that bar the way to the Spanish zone of General Francisco Franco's insurgent armies.

BRITAIN READY FOR 'ANYTHING'

She made it plain she will, if need be, resort to armed force, if diplomatic protests fail to stop a mass incursion of German troops into the Spanish zone—an invasion she believes is intended to wreck her scheme for colonial mobilization in the event of world war.

Britain, worried because German-built fortifications and long-range guns are reported going up at Ceuta, on the empire "lifeline" and 14 miles across the Strait of Gibraltar from the fortified British rock, gave grim evidence she is preparing for any eventuality.

With 94 of her greatest warships—home and Mediterranean fleets—already on the spot or pointed for the troublous waters between Africa and Spain, her admiralty quietly ordered officers and men of the royal navy and marines to report immediately any change in the names and addresses of their nearest relatives.

Germany, barred by treaty from encroachment in Morocco, said officially she "knows nothing" of the North African developments.

But France and Britain heard these reports, some of them from official sources:

German functionaries have taken over Spanish Moroccan administration from the Spanish insurgents; more than 3000 German marines and troops have landed in the zone; barracks and illegal fortifications, with German long range guns pointing out over the straits, are rising; German warships and submarines are at Ceuta, and two Nazi men o' war have anchored at Tangier, in the international zone.

All this recalled 1911 and Agadir, the Moroccan port where the German warship Panther, dispatched to "protect German subjects," almost touched off the World War three years in advance. A Franco-German accord quieted the situation for the time.

Italy's Cabinet voted sharp increases in army, navy and air force appropriations as budget deficit reached 3,172,951,743 lire.

50,000 FOREIGN TROOPS

The stirring scenes in Morocco served to draw attention from mainland Spain, where 50,000 foreign troops are fighting on one side or the other of the six months' war between a Socialist-Republican government and Fascist, military insurgents.

Yet reliable reports indicated a continued influx of thousands of German and Italian troops to the Fascist side through the "mystery port" of Cadiz. They came in ships which flew no flags and bore no names, and they wore brand new Spanish insurgent uniforms.

Thus, French officials charged, Germany and Italy kept up their "volunteer" aid of General Franco while waiting for Great Britain, France and Russia to act on general "hands off Spain" counter-proposals to Franco-British pleas that the volunteer enlistments cease.

BRITAIN IN PROTEST

Overnight the Fascist armies at the doorstep of Madrid bombed the city, hitting the British embassy and wounding two British subjects. Britain protested—officially and bitterly, after the second emergency session of her cabinet in two days.

France's growing belief that Germany intends to "get into Spanish Morocco and stay there" made an independent problem of the Nazi north African incursion.

Nazi engineers under military command were reported reorganizing the Reich iron mines near Melilla. That tied in with the German need and demand for the raw materials and colonies she lost because of the World War.

France Threatens to Stop Hitler With Armed Force

Paris, Jan. 9 (AP)—France threatened today to resort to arms if necessary to prevent German occupation of Spanish Morocco.

Foreign office sources expressed fear their diplomatic warning to Spanish insurgents against opening the strategic North African territory to Germany would fall on deaf ears, leaving France no alternative but action.

An official frankly declared France would go to any lengths to eject Nazi troops from the Spanish protectorate which separates French Morocco from the homeland.

The French garrison at Fez, capital of the French territory, was placed in a virtual state of mobilization, reportedly under orders to remain in barracks awaiting commands.

ARMY OF 100,000 MEN

The normal troop strength of 40,000 in French Morocco was ordered increased to 100,000.

Advices from French Morocco told of a steadily increasing German infiltration into Spanish Morocco controlled by Gen. Franco's insurgent Fascists and the seat of their revolt.

Sources close to the foreign office said French representations to the Franco headquarters at Tetuan, Spanish Morocco, charged:

1—A number of German functionaries have taken over the administration of the country.

2—A number of German troops already have landed in violation of existing treaties.

FORTIFICATIONS ILLEGAL

4—Illegal fortifications are being erected.

One high French official, referring to the belief Germany sought a foothold in Morocco as a lever for bargaining for other colonies, said emphatically:

"We think the German idea is to get into Spanish Morocco and stay there.

4 Killed, 2 Britons Hurt; Rebels Bomb Neutral Zone

Madrid, Jan 9 (AP) — Four persons were killed and two British subjects were injured in a night raid by insurgent planes who bombed diplomatic headquarters of three nations—Great Britain, Germany and Finland—Socialist officials announced today.

The Fascist assault, concentrated on the so-called "neutral zone" of embassies and legations last night, was renewed with fresh vigor today as the government defense council labored to evacuate civilian residents from the besieged capital.

Insurgent bombers dropped 15 explosive missiles on Socialist barricades in northwestern University City after artillery and aviation units joined in a concerted attack to break through government lines on the outskirts of the capital.

The night raid damaged British and German embassies and the Finnish legation while almost every pane of glass in the Dutch and Egyptian legations were shattered by the explosions.

Today's bombings were centered about a mile east of the British embassy and followed four earlier attacks on fortified positions of government militiamen.

Socialist defenders answered the hail of steel with artillery fire and government pilots blasted insurgent positions near Casa De Campo Park and Aravaca.

Streams of refugees which have poured into Madrid during its 11-week siege complicated problems of Socialist officials, already assuming a serious aspect by injuries to foreigners in embassy buildings.

(Americans housed in the United States embassy last week were imperilled during an aerial attack by Fascist bombing planes.)

2 German Warships Anchor at Tangier

Casablanca, French Morocco Jan. 9 (AP)—Telephoned advices from Tangier, in the internationalized Morocco zone today said two German warships—one the pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee—had arrived there. Tangier is 30 miles from Ceuta, Spanish Morocco, scene of a reported mass incursion of armed Germans.

The name of the second German warship was not given in the telephone advices. The reports said it had arrived yesterday.

Sailors of the two warships were given shore leave.

At the same time the first ships of the French Atlantic fleet steamed into the Mediterranean for forthcoming maneuvers and French authorities, highly concerned over the reports of heavy German infiltrations reinforced the border between French and Spanish Morocco.

A new regiment of Senegalese (native) troops was ordered from the capital at Fez to join the patrol between the city and the nearby Spanish zone.

50,000 Foreign Troops Fighting Now in Spain

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 9—Between 30,000 and 50,000 foreign volunteers were estimated today to be fighting in the Spanish civil war while the naval concentration ordered in Spanish waters was believed the largest since the world war.

The estimate of international troops in Spain was compiled from authoritative, although unofficial sources. It could not be verified officially.

About 10,000 Italians and an equal number of Germans were reported.

Rebels Hurl German Forces Against Madrid

By THOMAS A. LOAYZA
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Madrid, Jan. 9—Ruthlessly, with a profligacy of human lives hardly witnessed since the Battle of the Somme, Generalissimo Francisco Franco today pushed his German regiments, Moors and foreign legionnaires on in a fight-to-the-finish, each mile of advance northwest of Madrid costing the insurgents hundreds of dead.

"The battle will go on until Madrid surrenders," was the insurgent reply to the question asked everywhere in Madrid—how long can the rebels continue such sacrifices of man-power?

Berlin Scoffs at French Fear Over Morocco

By PIERRE J. HUSS
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Berlin, Jan. 9—German officialdom adopted an amused and skeptical attitude today over France's sensational charges Nazi troops are being assigned to Spanish Morocco, chief stronghold of General Francisco Franco's rebels.

However, reports from London that France had suggested an Anglo-French naval blockade of Spanish Morocco as a warning to Germany were greeted more seriously.

Britain Protests Bombing of Madrid Embassy

London, Jan. 9 (AP)—Great Britain sent a vigorous protest to the Spanish Insurgent government against the aerial bombing of its Madrid embassy building.

Sir Henry G. Chilton, British ambassador to Spain was instructed to forward the protest to the Spanish Fascist administration after the Cabinet met in its second emergency session in two days at No. 10 Downing street.

graphed assurance to the head of the American Federation of Labor's metal trades department that the corporation would not enter into an agreement with any organization "interfering with legitimate jurisdiction" of the craft unions.

The federation has suspended members of the committee for industrial organization headed by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, for their efforts to organize labor by industries instead of by crafts. The U. A. W. A. is a C. I. O. affiliate.

John P. Frey, metal trades department president, telegraphed the Cleveland Metal Trades Council that craft union members were "in no way bound to be governed by the action of others" in the strike called by the U. A. W. A. in the Cleveland plant of the Fisher Body Company, a General Motors unit.

SEEK JOBS RETURN

At Cleveland, Peter G. Schick, chairman of a non-strikers' committee, said 3425 of the 7211 Fisher employes were ready to return to work. Louis F. Spisak, president of the U. A. W. A. local, replied that "we have more than half of the plant employes with us."

George E. Boysen, former mayor of Flint, Mich., sponsoring the "Flint alliance for the security of our jobs, our homes and our community," said today 8500 persons had signed membership cards and that he considered each signer was expressing a desire to "return to work if he is out of work, or to remain at work if he is now working."

The greatest numbers were at Detroit, where 28,972 were out of work, and at Flint, Mich., where 26,339 were idle.

A group of employes at a Detroit Chevrolet plant telegraphed President Roosevelt a request that he "use all the influence of your high office" to effect an "early settlement of this strike."

Minor disorders connected with the labor crisis occurred in two cities last night.

Santa Tompkins, who said he was an employe of a Fisher Body plant at Flint, but was not a striker, told police he was hit on the head when he jumped on an automobile from which an amplifier carried appeals for union support.

At St. Louis, Mo., missiles were thrown at sound truck announcing a union meeting. It was near a General Motors plant at the time. There were no casualties.

Three clergymen dispatched telegrams to Knudsen and Martin offering their "friendly services" to arrive at a "national understanding between the corporation and the union."

The signers were Rabbi Barnett Bricker, chairman of the Social Justice committee, Central Conference of American Rabbis; the Rev. James Myers, industrial secretary Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, and Msgr. John A. Ryan, director of social action, National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Michael Skehan, 65, was found dead today on the stone steps of his home in Milford street, South End. His skull was fractured, City Hospital surgeons said. Police believed him the victim of an accidental fall.

Britain's Grim Warning to Hitler: 'Halt!'

A titanic armada of more than 150 British and French warships today flung the gauntlet down to Germany, Italy and Portugal and hemmed Spain and the Moroccos in a ring of steel and dynamite and death. "Stop Hotler!" orders were issued. France massed a vast army of 100,000 men and had 63 warships riding ready to shoot. England's contribution to the war fleet was 92 warships, including these huge fortresses of the sea. They had "war-time casualty orders." Vessels shown, with not an inch of wasted space on any deck, are the Renown (in front) with the Hood, the Valiant and the Barham following. They're all stripped for action.

STRATEGY SEEN IN ROOSEVELT COURT FIRE

Washington, Jan. 9 (AP)—President Roosevelt's strategy on entering his second administration, sources in touch with him understood today, will be to give the Supreme Court and business an opportunity to "follow the election returns" and guide his course by the results.

Unless more liberal interpretations of the Constitution are forthcoming and business steps up employment, enlargement of legislative powers may be undertaken and budget balancing will be deferred.

INAUGURAL FOLLOW-UP

This was the consensus at the Capitol and among White House advisors, on the basis of the two blunt messages Mr. Roosevelt addressed to Congress this week.

Democratic leaders expected him to follow through in the inaugural address January 20 as part of a program to activate public opinion on the wage and hour and unemployment problems.

Experts working on labor legislation reported having a difficult time trying to square their drafts with restrictions on federal power as defined by the NRA, AAA and Guffy coal decisions.

SEEK EARLY RULINGS

With enactment of those measures, an attempt would be made to get early court rulings.

If the new business regulation and farms bills are thrown out, White House advisors look for one of two things to happen. Either an amendment to broaden Federal powers will be projected in accordance with the Democratic platform, or an attempt will be made to give Congress a veto power over judicial decisions.

Deal Backers Seek Means to Curb Court

Washington, Jan. 9 (INS)—A powerful group of congressional and other administration backers was called into session here today to discuss means of curbing the Supreme Court as the first direct result of President Roosevelt's message calling on the judiciary for more liberal interpretation of the constitution.

Included in the group discussing the relation between Congress and the courts were such figures as Senator George Norris, veteran independent of Nebraska; John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers; Jerome Frank, leading administration lawyer and Morris Ernst, New York attorney.

Budget Message WPA "Go Ahead" Signal

Washington, Jan. 9 (AP)—The President's budget message was the signal today for the Works Progress Administration to go ahead with plans to care for more than 2,000,000 unemployed for the rest of the fiscal year.

The Works Progress Administration action is based on Mr. Roosevelt's statement that he would ask for a $650,000,000 appropriation to carry the works progress and related programs from February 1 though June.

Thousands Honor Brother Andre

Montreal, Que., Jan. 9 (INS)—Brother Andre, 91, widely known as the "Miracle Man of Montreal," was honored by thousands of his faithful followers and many distinguished persons at his funeral services in St. James Cathedral here today.

Mayor J. Adhemar Raynault, government officials from Ottawa and Quebec, and Mgr. Georges Gauthier, archbishop co-adjucator of Montreal, marched in the funeral procession. Thousands knelt in the slush and rain as the cortege passed from St. Joseph's Oratory to the downtown cathedral.

Following the service, the body was removed from the church to the crypt at the oratory where it will remain for public veneration until Tuesday. A marble mausoleum, now under construction, will be its final resting place.

Girl Comes To Tell Her Vice Story

Margaret Toth, 16-year-old key witness in the Brookline vice probe, came to Boston last night prepared to testify before a Norfolk county grand jury in defiance of scores of death threats, it was learned by the Boston Evening American.

Men prominent in Brookline and Boston, desperate over their plight because of details the Toth girl is expected to reveal, have written her more than 200 letters, an investigation disclosed.

SOME THREATS SIGNED

The tenor of most of the correspondence directed to the former playgirl at her Third avenue home in Passaic, N. J., ran:

"My reputation and business are at stake."

"My family will be ruined."

"I fear for the health of my wife if you should mention my name before the grand jury."

"I am a desperate man, I warn you not to talk. I will go to any end to prevent your talking."

Part of the conversation recorded was:

"Hello, Margaret. This is ——. You can't mention my name, can you? You told me that you were 19. That's what Al told me, too. I was always pretty decent with you, wasn't I? Well, for God's sake forget you ever met me! It means everything to me—you know that!"

CALLED AGAIN

The Toth girl was ordered by the investigator to hang up without answering. The long distance operator came back with the call again but was told that the Toth girl was out at the time. No further effort was made by this Brookline man to contact her.

The Toth girl, brought here last night by Miss Mary McManus, investigator from the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, who was responsible for "breaking" the probe, is being kept under strict guard and will not come out of seclusion until the grand jury meets in Dedham January 27, the probers said.

Investigators for Dewing's office have checked with utmost caution the names and identities of those the Toth girl say visited her in the Ivy street apartment and find her information reliable. Many times to their own amazement.

Another letter directed to the Toth girl stated:

"I wanted to help you get out, didn't I? I offered you a good job but you told me you were afraid to leave. When you told me you got nothing from the Schienfains except clothing and food, I offered to help you by talking to Al, but you refused. I hope you haven't had a change of heart about me—particularly when you go before that grand jury. I know you can tell them plenty."

This letter was signed, and revelation of the name, investigators stated, would cause a sensation.

It was learned from an authoritative source today that the scope of the six-month probe has broken wide open and that the spotlight of investigation is directed on at least five Brookline town officials.

LOOT 3 HOMES IN QUINCY

Ransacking of three Quincy homes was revealed by Quincy police today. They believe the breaks were committed by a gang of ex-convicts.

Value of the stolen property—including jewelry, silverware, clothing, furs and liquor—totalled $2000.

The houses ransacked were those of Frank Limmer, 1384 Quincy Shore drive, where the burglars took $700 worth of property; Ralph Estes, 20 Narragansett road, $1000, and William McClellan, 41 Apthorp street, $300.

9 GREAT OLD MAIDS

Preacher Lists, Lauds Them

Chicago, Jan. 9 (AP)—The Rev. Clinton C. Cox took up the cudgels today for old maids of whatever age or clime.

The world, he declared, owes a lot to spinsters—and "it is time it recognized it."

He undertook to do his bit by preparing a sermon entitled "Tribute to Spinsters" for Sunday night delivery at the Drexel Park Presbyterian Church.

"Why, some of the finest things in history have been done by women who never married," he said.

1—FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE, the Saint of modern nursing.

2—CLARA BARTON, founder of the Red Cross.

3—JANE ADDAMS, noted social worker and founder of Hull House.

4—FRANCES WILLARD, founder of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

5—CHRISTABEL PANKHURST, an organizer of the women's sufferage movement in England.

8—QUEEN ELIZABETH of England.

BIG FAREWELL FETE IN N. Y.

By JAMES F. McENANEY

New York, Jan. 9—Former Governor James M. Curley of Massachusetts and his bride were on the high seas today aboard the liner Britannic, bound for Nassau in the Bahamas as the first stop on their honeymoon tour.

The couple sailed from here last evening after a tumultuous farewell party tendered by relatives and friends including former Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York.

Prior to his departure the former Bay State governor talked briefly on his future plans giving no definite information and refusing to comment on the reports that he might be appointed governor-general of the Philippines.

No Offer Yet

"Inasmuch as the position has not been offered to me, it would be very impolite for me to discuss it," he said when asked for comment on the reports.

The Governor said he had received several "good business offers" but had made no decision concerning any of them and added that, after all his adult life had been in the political arena and it was likely that he would return again.

"No one who has ever tasted politics can be through with it," he said. "I might say that I am a long way from being through."

He then referred once again to the tumultuous demonstration that had been given him as he took the traditional walk down the State House steps after turning over the administration of Massachusetts to Governor Charles F. Hurley and declared it was a sign that the people of Boston might demand him as mayor.

Sharp Comment

Regarding his successor in office he again expressed good wishes to him in the coming days but had sharp comment to make on Hurley's criticism of his administration.

Speaking of [illegible] proposal to investigate the legality of his action in taking control of the Boston State Hospital from trustees Curley said:

"The hospital action was taken on the judgment of Assistant Attorney-General James Roman, who is a recognized authority on such legal matters."

High Hat?

It looked today as if the 25th reunion of Harvard's class of 1912 were likely to be a definitely high hat affair, next spring.

Anyhow, arrangements for the party got off to a very swanky start as five cane-toting Boston members of the committee in charge appeared in morning coats and silk toppers to prove to a quintet of their New York colleagues that "all New Englanders aren't necessarily hicks."

Tenor Swaps Gargles With Torch Singer

They Tell Secrets of Their Throats

Radio and screen star tenor James Melton acts as an expert on the care of the throat here as he helps Hildegarde ward off laryngitis between shows at the RKO Boston Theater. Care of a singer's throat is a matter of importance, and you may be sure such topics are constantly discussed when singers get together.

JAMES MELTON, HILDEGARDE ON SAME BILL, MEET

By BETTY DI PESA

And what is better James Melton is a very attractive brunette. And Hildegarde is a "yum-yum" blonde. At least, my photographer said so. Who am I to know? I kept looking at Melton, and you couldn't blame me. Or could you?

Well, anyhow, each is appearing at the Keith-Boston theater this week and we thought it nice if we held a duo interview. You know, "boy meets girl."

We thought the gesture would then be better. Nice looking couple and [illegible].

WHAT PRICE GARGLE

"What, no 'we we'?" We introduce the two: "Mr. Melton, Miss Hildegarde."

They had glimpsed each other in the wings. But had never been formally introduced. What happens?

Hildegarde coughs a little. Melton [illegible] his collar a little as if it were hurting.

And Hildegarde says:

"What kind of a gargle do you use?"

Melton begins in a very medical tone. And each goes off on a tangent concerning the respective merits of various gargles.

The reporter does not quite follow the advanced medical terms. Besides, supposing she does have a touch of laryngitis once in a while, so what? Nothing.

She has three movie companies after her services, but prefers radio and stage. Besides, she feels she isn't ready for movies yet. Some day, perhaps.

Originally played the piano and didn't know she had a voice until somebody heard her singing casually and informed her.

"I never dreamed I had a voice," she says.

About Melton:

Has appeared in two pictures for Columbia. And is going to appear in more. Loves concert work and hates golf.

Has Buddy Rogers' brown eyes. Rather go by train and arrive a day later, than travel by plane and get to—well—a few years sooner. (This is a family newspaper, Mr. Melton, please!)

Yachting is his hobby. That's why he can't leave New York too long. It's in Long Island Sound. Swell for yachting.

Slater Washburn Divorced by His War-Day Bride

Worcester, Jan 9—Finis to a war-time romance was written in probate court here today when Mrs. Hester McLellan Washburn, socially prominent Worcester matron, was granted a divorce from former Representative Slater Washburn, now of Boston.

Washburn, member of a distinguished Massachusetts family, went overseas as an army private in the American Expeditionary Force, later winning a commission.

His marriage to the former Miss McLellan took place in 1918 at Princeton, with social notables from Boston and New York among the guests.

WIFE Of Convict SAD

KIDNAPER GLAD IT'S OVER

Stoughton, Jan. 9 — Her dreams of love and happiness shattered, a 29-year-old wife of 16 months was heartbroken at the home of her parents here today following the admission from the lips of her husband that he was an escaped convict from Idaho state prison.

While still clear in her shocked mind are the words of her husband, Mrs. Florence E. Alden tearfully muttered over and over again:

"I just can't believe it! It can't be true. I can't believe it. I never had another fellow."

In Dedham jail was Frank Ashley Alden, 37, Works Progress Administration worker, awaiting trial on charges of attacking two women. He also awaited arrival of Idaho state prison officials.

Girl's Work

Alden admitted that he was "Frank Lamarr," who escaped in 1931 after serving three years of a life sentence on charges of kidnaping and armed robbery.

His identity was disclosed through the alertness of Elizabeth Ryan of Maple avenue, Cambridge, a clerk in the office of the Department of Public Safety. She was making a checkup of his fingerprints which, according to usual procedure, had been sent over by Dedham jail officials.

After his escape, according to his admission, Alden drifted to Massachusetts and lived in Brockton where he met his wife, now grief-stricken and disillusioned. Her father, Wilfred Estebrooks of Tenth street, was an employe of the Brockton Gas and Light Company.

They were married in August, 1935, and set up housekeeping on Pearl street here where the couple were looked upon as happily married. He was known as a respectable citizen.

Sorry for Her

He later got various types of employment on Works Progress Administration projects.

Police stated that his identity as an escaped convict might never have come to light but for the alleged attack on the two women in Stoughton two weeks ago.

"I'm sorry for Florence. I thought maybe I could go straight and it would be all forgotten."

3 Windows Broken In Cambridge

Plate glass windows of two lunch rooms and a market, all in Cambridge street, Cambridge, were mysteriously smashed today.

The damage was done by sidewalk bricks but police said they were not sure whether local vandals were to blame or whether roisterers in some passing automobile had hurled the missiles.

Thar's Gold in That Sun Suit

A beauty from Barnstable on Cape Cod is resting at Miami, Florida. It would seem that Gloria Wheeden in her sparkling beach outfit made of gold mesh is trying to outshine the sun of Florida clime. Quite striking—we'd say.

HUNT MOTHER OF ABANDONED BABY

N. Y. TRACES BOSTON CLUE

Boston police today sought in vain for "Mrs. Estelle Grogin," who abandoned her two-hours-old baby girl in a New York hotel yesterday afternoon.

The child is now being cared for in the New York Foundling Asylum, 175 East 68th street, New York city, to which she was taken in a radio police car.

When the modishly dressed brunette, "Mrs. Grogan," registered at the hotel she registered as living at 472 West Washington street, Boston.

There is no West Washington street in Boston. Boston police checked Washington street, downtown, in Dorchester and Brighton. No one knew a woman answering the description of the woman who registered at the New York hotel.

All police stations were asked if the men knew a "Mrs. Estelle Grogie." None did.

New York detectives and Boston police said they believe the woman registered under an assumed name.

She registered at the hotel at 10 a. m. yesterday and is described as being about 26 years of age, five feet, two inches tall, and weighing about 150 pounds. She was wearing a tweed suit and long coat and carrying a small suit case.

At 4:30 p. m. the nude baby, squalling lustily and kicking her heels, was found by Hannah Shanahan, a maid, in room 2133. She reported her find to the hotel housekeeper and the management notified the police.

Dr. Martin Polo of St. Vincent's Hospital went to the hotel and examined the child.

"The child is about two hours old," said the doctor. "It's a girl and a rather healthy one," he added.

Dr. Polo said it was his opinion that the baby had been born without medical aid or assistance of any kind.

EDWARD And Wally to RETURN

GIVEN BRITISH HOME, REPORT

By CHARLES A. SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

London, Jan. 9—Belief grew in informed circles today that the exiled Duke of Windsor will return to England shortly after the coronation of his brother and successor, King George VI, on May 12.

Accompanying him as her royal highness the Duchess of Windsor, it was believed, will be Wallis Warfield Simpson, Baltimore-born beauty, for love of whom he renounced his throne.

With Mrs. Simpson's divorce from Ernest Aldrich Simpson, her second husband, due to be made absolute in London, Tuesday, April 27, it was believed the Duke and Mrs. Simpson would be quietly married, probably in Vienna, early in May.

With the marriage accomplished and with his brother formally crowned, the Duke, it was indicated, hopes he will be able to slip into England by late spring or early summer without fear of reviving public controversy.

Belvedere Haven

For part of the year he hopes to be able to lead the life of an English country gentleman at Fort Belvedere, his old country home, where he spent his last days in England and where he signed the formal document of abdication.

If this plan can be realized, it is understood it is the duke's intention to spend the spring, summer and fall in England, and the winter abroad, probably on the French Riviera or in Austria, where he may purchase a home.

The duke and his American-born duchess at first will shun the limelight and will not accept invitations to social functions in London, according to friends here.

In Seclusion

They will keep to the seclusion afforded by Fort Belvedere, occasionally entertaining intimate friends but mainly devoting their time to gardening, about which both are enthusiastic, supervising alterations to the gardens and residence, and looking after their dogs.

Any suggestion that either the Duke or his Duchess will be persona non grata with the royal family can be dismissed, according to informed quarters, and it is anticipated that both will periodically visit the homes of royal relatives.

At the time of the Duke's abdication it was declared that Fort Belvedere, which, as Crown property, is always in the possession of the reigning monarch, would be given to the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester.

Today, however, it was declared it is King George's intention to bestow it on his elder brother, who will thus be able to resume his occupancy of the residence upon his return to England.

Servants who at the time of the duke's abdication were given one month's notice have since been told it is possible they will have their jobs back by mid-year.

C-C-Cold!

Sylvia Sidney So Finds N. Y.

SYLVIA SIDNEY

"B-r-r-r-r!" said Sylvia, bundled in ermine. "It's g-g-good to be b-b-b-back, but my teeth won't stop ch-ch-ch-chattering."

The actress replied vehemently to rumors she intended to desert the screen for the stage. She said:

"Nonsense. I like pictures. I like Hollywood. I like Hollywood people. I intend to stay."

Gilbert's Home Sold

Hollywood, Jan. 9—The late John Gilbert's luxurious home has been bought by Miriam Hopkins and will be completely redecorated, she announced.

Narcotic Addicts Win Stay in China

Authorities announced further killings would be held in abeyance in an effort to win approval for a "policy of leniency."

Runciman Coming

Glasgow, Jan. 9 (INS)—Walter Runciman, chairman of the British Board of Trade, was en route to the United States today to discuss lowering of trade barriers with President Roosevelt.

'Stork Death Father' Faces Trial

SLAIN WIFE'S BABY NORMAL

Oakland, Cal., Jan. 9 (AP)—The state prepared to prosecute "Baby" Randall's father for the slaying of his wife while medical science, which saved the infant at the life-and-death crossroads, gave him "every chance" today to survive.

Dr. Clarence Du Puy, who delivered the baby boy through a Caesarian operation just before the mother died from a bullet wound, said the infant was "entirely normal."

Assistant District Attorney Charles Wehr announced a murder charge would be brought against Horatio "Ray" Randall, 21, despite his denial he shot his wife and her aunt Thursday night.

The aunt, Miss Amelia Hohnhaus, 65, was in a critical condition.

Randall's 19-year-old bride, the former Elsie Hohnhaus of Fort Wayne, Ind., died a few minutes after Dr. Du Puy saved the unborn child.

Police Inspectors Lou Jewell and James McDonald asserted a check of Randall's story that he was at an aviation field at the time of the shooting had "blown it sky high."

Attendants at Alameda County Hospital said William Hohnhaus, father of the slain wife, is expected to come from Fort Wayne to take charge of the body and arrange care of the infant.

Bishop Duffy Goes to Buffalo

Vatican City, Jan. 9 (AP)—Bishop John A. Duffy of Syracuse, N. Y., was named bishop of Buffalo today, Vatican officials announced.

Junior Roosevelt At White House To Map Future

Washington, Jan. 9 (INS)—Drawn and underweight from his two months' confinement at the Boston hospital with a sinus ailment, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., at the White House today planned his immediate future.

The President's third son said he probably would rest here until the exact date of his June marriage with Miss Ethel du Pont is decided, and then go to Florida.

As soon as he is recovered, he will return to Harvard, where he is a senior, adding he was "plenty worried" about the make-up exams he must take to be graduated.

Questioned regarding post-graduation plans, young Roosevelt admitted indecision, adding he might enter Harvard Law School. Asked if he would enter the employ of his fiancee's father, the well-known Wilmington, Del., munitions magnate, Franklin, Jr., replied emphatically, "No."

Miss du Pont, he said, probably will visit him here soon. Regarding their wedding date, young Roosevelt said his fiancee would name it.

"That's the bride's privilege, you know," he smiled.

Fire Puts End To Love Scenes

JEAN HARLOW

Hollywood, Jan. 9—Robert Taylor didn't know whether to laugh or be angry today over a trick played on him by Jean Harlow.

When the couple were all prepared to begin their love scenes in "The Man in Possession," three fire trucks sirened up to the stage door and got ready for action. Taylor asked what they were doing there.

"Well, Greta Garbo's dress caught fire while you were romancing her," Jean replied. "Can't tell what will happen when you start on me."

AS I SEE IT

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate. International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 9—We have been consulting the stars, per an eminent astrologer, and we have some great news for everybody except the poor fellow who is elected President of these United States in 1940.

DAMON RUNYON

Whoever he is, he will not live out his term.

This ought to give pause to the good Senator Vandenberg, and Governor Earle, and the rest of the statesmen whose names are being handied about by their well wishers.

But the Duke of Windsor is to return to a throne, site not stated. It may not be the English throne, but it will be a throne somewhere.

For the next two and a half or three years we will have great prosperity in this country.

The stock market will be good.

Real estate will be terrific.

Cotton, and all pertaining to the earth, will do well. Capricorn is taking care of the case. Capricorn represents substance.

Hail to the Big League Prophet

A new cycle is being ushered in. Plenty of money will be turned loose. The South in particular will see pleasing times. The band will now kindly play "Dixie" in honor of our prophet, no busher in the league of seers, either.

He is A. F. Seward, a sparse man of medium height, with a bald head, and a brief bristle of a moustache, and a mere whisper of a goatee that once flowered against his chin like a spray of whisk-broom.

He has serious blue eyes, and speaks very rapidly, and gravely. He is 58 years old, and for 43 years he has been practicing astrology, if practicing is the term for it.

He has been on the boardwalk in Atlantic City for 37 years, and in Miami for 17 consecutive winters.

Dolled Up Like a Pullman Car

He comes here in a magnificent vehicle that looks exactly like a Pullman car all dolled up, and this car is parked every winter in a vacant lot at Flagler street and Biscayne boulevard.

Many a time we have stood in the crowd that usually surrounds the car and listened to Professor Seward or an assistant lecture on astrology, though we were always attracted more by their amazing facility of speech than by what they said.

We don't know much about this business of the stars, and are slightly skeptical about horoscopes, but we had heard that Professor Seward is considerably better than a raw hand at prophecy, so we looked him up to get a line on 1937. We had a notion to query him about a couple of horses that are going at Tropical Park next week, but we thought he might consider the question undignified.

We found Professor Seward in the midst of directing the building of an ornate hotel out Collins avenue, where a lot of ornate hotels have been built the past year.

Took Peek at Own Horoscope

Professor Seward's hotel is surrounded by a series of Professor Seward's apartment houses. It seems that in 1932 he took a peek at his own horoscope, and the planets told him to buy property on Collins avenue. The professor is not a man to ignore his planets, so he bought the property and built 11 apartments.

Then he took another swivel, as we say, at his horoscope and built 19 more apartments. A third glance set him to building this new hotel of 75 rooms as a starter, with 100 more rooms to be added later, and a brief contemplation of this material evidence gave us more respect for Professor Seward as a prophet than a recitation of his record.

The record includes a prediction in 1928 of the stock market bust in 1929, and of an earthquake along the borders of California and Mexico that finally popped up at Long Beach.

Professor Seward also predicted Roosevelt's re-election, promising if this one missed to walk from Miami to Atlantic City. He claims support of these predictions by publication thereof in advance of the occurrences. But the hotel and the apartment houses were good enough for us.

Couldn't Be Pinned Down on War

We tried to pin Professor Seward down to a war in 1937, but he wouldn't go beyond hinting that England, France, Germany and Russia are badly troubled, which really isn't news.

He said the planets aren't any too propitious right now for those born under Gemini, Cancer, Libra and Aries, but Scorpio, Capricorn, Taurus, and Leo are all right. President Roosevelt comes under Aquarius and Professor Seward said his sign is good.

We hope and trust we aren't making Professor Seward sound mixed up by our awkward translation of his planetary conversation. He is an intelligent and entertaining man.

One time down here the turf writers got him to come to a banquet with his astral chart, and he held a big mob of hearty drinkers enthralled with his lecture, though many of the guests were seeing stars before he started.

We Saw China in His Kitchen

He has been all over the world, and lectured in every important city on the face of the globe. He has an office in Chicago—he calls his quarters studios. He says that 65 per cent of the people in this country are now interested more or less in astrology, and have some understanding of it.

He took us into the kitchen of his new hotel, to show us his new china. The china is very nice. Professor Seward seems to have some knowledge of the hotel business.

We didn't like to ask him, but we found ourself wondering if the planets have informed him as to where all the guests are coming from after they get through with this hotel-building spree that is going on in Florida.

Then we went outside and took another look at our astrologer's expanse of property, and decided that if he doesn't know, no one else does. The stars have been good to Professor Seward.

BERMUDA CRUISE FREE

Prizes Offered at Birthday Ball

An Easter cruise to sunny Bermuda for two!

It's in the offing for some man or woman who holds the lucky ticket to the birthday ball for the President, which will be held in the Boston Garden on Friday evening, January 29.

During a short intermission between the military, musical, stage show and dancing program the lucky numbers that will result in gifts of a 1937 Ford sedan, Bermuda cruise and a score of other valuable donations to their holders will be drawn.

Because of the fact that hundreds of men and women are unable annually to attend the gala affair but have aided in the cause against infantile paralysis, it will not be necessary for the winner to be present.

STUDENTS PLAY POLITICS OVER FRANK OUSTER

Madison, Wis., Jan. 9 (INS)—In mimicry of their elders, University of Wisconsin students were playing politics today.

The student body was split into factions patterned on those that divided the board of regents into an 8 to 7 majority for the firing of President Glenn Frank.

The campus was in a ferment of caucuses and conferences as political unrest filtered down to the student level from high places.

Five earnest young men were appointed at one session to wait on Governor Philip LaFollette Monday and urge him to sponsor legislation providing for some other means of selecting regents than by the direct appointive power of the executive.

The Governor's recent appointments gave to the board the 8 to 7 majority which voted for the dismissal of President Frank.

President Frank's comment on the detailed statement issued by Governor LaFollette, listing the sins of omission of the Frank administration of eleven and one-half years, was that:

"There is nothing new in the governor's charges. He is merely repeating what he said in 1930. His statement is full of misstatements which can be answered by the actual record."

Dr. Frank added that since 1930 his contract has been renewed six times.

$50,000 BAIL IN GEM THEFT

cause to hold Linden in $50,000 on a charge of robbery while armed.

The prisoner was at once remanded to Worcester County Jail, under heavy guard.

OFFERS TO SELL "GEM"

While waiting in court for the judge to take the bench, Linden glared at the press table, then pulled a ring off his finger and sent it over to reporters by a court officer.

"Tell 'em I'll sell 'em this for $15," he said. "It's what they've been describing as a 'costly diamond,' but they'll get stuck if they give me $15 for it."

While Linden was being arraigned in Westboro, state detectives and Boston police were collaborating in an effort to locate the Kennedy holdup loot.

HOPE TO FIND LOOT

They hoped that developments in the case today would lead them to a cache containing the bulk of the "hot" gems.

Recent efforts to dispose of these gems were vainly made in Boston, Worcester and Springfield, police learned through underworld channels.

According to reports in which the authorities placed credence, "fences" ordinarily willing to handle stolen jewelry refused to take a chance with the Kennedy gems, claiming them to be too dangerous a buy.

Best clues being followed today by police in their search for the Kennedy robbery loot were offered, they said, by their check-up of movements of a known Boston criminal, believed to be ringleader and brains of the gang which invaded the Kennedy home.

This man, according to authorities, was "on the lam" at the time of the Kennedy hold-up.

He was wanted on grave charges and needed money to finance a get-away or to buy himself temporary security in some underworld hide-out.

Full description of the suspected "brains" of the gang was in the hands of state police today.

2 Critically Hurt In Auto Chase

Worcester, Jan. 9.—Two men were critically injured here today when the car in which they were riding crashed into a stone wall during a 50-mile-an-hour chase by police.

In a serious condition at Worcester City Hospital are John Johnson, 36, of Front street and Peter Savage, 22, of Plane street. Both their names are on the danger list.

The chase started from a Portland street garage where the machine was allegedly stolen. As the car shot out to the street the nightman, Clifford E. Pickering, and a friend, Joseph Casale, jumped in another auto and started pursuit.

Man Found Slain At Filling Station

Greenwich, Conn., Jan. 9 (AP)—The body of Frank S. Scaramuzzo, 52, night attendant at a Post road filling station, was found today in front of the station by police who said they went there on a telephone "tip." He had been shot four times.

Police discounted robbery as a possible motive for the shooting. Cash in the till was intact.

Sonja Henie, Skate Star, Flies From Boston

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Skating Queen in Romance —Maybe It's T. Power

A diamond and sapphire skating figure sat pertly on the fuzzy hat of blonde Sonja Henie, Norwegian skating queen, as she boarded a Pittsburgh-bound plane at East Boston airport. She says it's a gift from a "very, very dear friend."

Last night she was in Providence. Tonight she has an engagement in Pittsburgh. But she is in a hurry to return to Hollywood.

"Yes, yes, to make a picture. But I have so many friends there. I DO miss them."

She wouldn't say whether the diamond-studded skating figure came from Tyrone Power, Hollywood movie actor. But he seems to be the No. 1 romance.

Sonja is really more interested in romance now. Much more than in her many versatile accomplishments. Swimming, tennis and fancy skating is still part of her life—but just a part.

Asked if Tyrone Power had anything to do with it, she answered coyly:

BANKER HAYDEN RITES

Burial to Be in Cambridge

After funeral services Monday in New York, Charles Hayden, Boston-born banker, philanthropist and founder of the powerful financial house of Hayden, Stone & Co., will be buried in Mt. Auburn cemetery, Cambridge, it was announced today.

He died at his New York home, where he had been ill for several weeks. He was 66 years old.

A bachelor, who had devoted his entire adult life to business, Hayden, at the time he was stricken, was an active figure in 58 corporations, including banks, mines, railroads and public utilities.

Son of Josiah Willard Hayden, a Boston shoe manufacturer, Charles Hayden went to work as a bank clerk for $3 a week when he was graduated from Technology at the age of 21.

With Galen L. Stone, he organized Hayden, Stone and Company in Boston in 1892, opening a New York branch of the firm in 1906.

BUDGETED TIME

Because of his diversified business activities, Hayden prided himself on budgeting his time as other men budgeted money. He was always at his office at 8:30 a. m., never leaving until 5:30 or later.

He found opportunity, however, to become an expert horseman and a bridge player of exceptional ability. He kept a stable of thoroughbreds and was an ardent yachtsman.

Among his many widely known philanthropies were large gifts to the Red Cross, to Technology research foundations and to the American Museum of Natural History, for which he built the $150,000 planetarium which bears his name.

CLUB MEMBER HERE

A brother, J. Willard Hayden, was with Charles Hayden at the time of his death and was his only surviving relative.

Finds Malden Wife Dead by Hanging

Mrs. Jennie Nichols, 43, of Newhall street, Malden, was found dead today, hanging by a rope in the kitchen of her home.

Mrs. Nichols had been a semi-invalid for years, her husband told police. She was the mother of three children.

HURLEY'S AXE HITS HEADS OF CURLEY MEN

as supervisor of closed banks by William P. Husband, Jr., of Belmont, said he would take a minor position.

"I have accepted Governor Hurley's offer to remain in the banking department in a minor capacity," he told reporters. "I don't know, however, what the position will be."

His old position carried a salary of $5000 a year.

While the resignation of Scolponeti held the spotlight of Governor Hurley's "economy axe" move, it was learned that further "house cleaning" will be made in every state department.

The governor's new plans came after 12 members of the state banking department were among the first to fall.

Governor Hurley since his election, it was learned, had requested and received from various state department heads the names of temporary employes and information as to their duties and salaries.

AFTER ALL DEPARTMENTS

Among the departments are insurance, public works and board of tax appeals, but it was learned the governor plans to "go over" every state department.

The plan of the governor to inspect the list of employes of the various state departments was the forerunner of the cut in the banking department, as exclusively predicted by the Boston Evening American.

Governor Hurley was not in his office today, spending the day with his family in honor of his 13th wedding anniversary. At night there will be a small dinner at the Hurley home in Cambridge and then the governor and his wife plan to attend the theatre to see Gorge M. Cohan in "Fulton of Oak Falls."

CURLEY'S EX-AIDE OUT

Another high-salaried man dropped in the banking department was Henry C. Rowland, former secretary to Governor Curley, who was ousted from his $5500-a-year post as liquidation counsel. He was repaced by Leo M. Harlow of North Easton, who served as chairman of the Democratic State convention in Springfield.

Appointment of Husband to the $5000-a-year post as supervisor of closed banks gave new life today to a report that John Lacey Delaney of Cambridge will be named by Governor Hurley as bank commissioner.

PIERCE TO RESIGN

The resignation of Bank Commissioner Henry H. Pierce is expected to be tendered by him sometime after January 15, although his term does not expire for several months.

Also prominently mentioned for the bank commissioner's post is Herbert Scott, former national bank examiner, former bank examiner for the Boston Clearing House, and more recently an employe of the federal housing commission.

Delaney, according to reliable reports, had been slated for Lawlor's post. He is at present liquidating agent for the closed Webster National Bank of Webster, which is under federal supervision. He is a former member of the Cambridge school committee and was closely identified with the Hurley campaign.

As Harlow and Husband assumed their new duties today with orders from Governor Hurley to "completely reorganize" the liquidation division of the banking department, 15 official heads of liquidating counsels gazed upward to see the shadow of the "economy guillotine" hovering over them.

SALARIES UP TO $4500

The liquidating counsels, acting as legal advisors to liquidating agents, are drawing salaries ranging from $2500 to $4500 per year.

Liquidating counsels whose posts will come under the scrutiny of Harlow and Husband in their reorganization of the liquidation division are:

AFTER CURLEY MEN

Israel Ruby of the Ioman Trust, Cambridge; salary, $2500.

Curley appointees among this group are expected to be among the first to feel the "economy axe. All, with the exception of Eley, Heady, Sullivan, O'Callahan and Moriarty, were appointed by Bank Commissioner Pierce under the administration of former Governor Curley. The others were named during the administration of former Governor Ely.

Roche Discusses Verdict

Discussing the Superior court verdict which found him guilty of manslaughter in the death of an elderly waiter, Francis J. Roche, once a candidate for the mayoralty in Cambridge, confers with his attorney, Daniel J. Gallagher. He was fined $400 by Judge Nelson P. Brown. A kick administered by Roche to Austin McKeough, waiter aboard a floating night club, allegedly caused the waiter's death.

the case. Those, however, I shall dismiss from my mind as an element in my decision.

"I am perfectly convinced that the death was the approximate result of the assault. In view of there being no conviction against Mr. Roche for similar crimes I believe a fine should be imposed. I believe the fine should be substantial, however. It was an unjustified assault."

According to the testimony of waiters on the S. S. Royale, Roche kicked McKeough as he turned away from the table at which the Cambridge attorney, his wife and John Lehane of Cambridge, secretary of the State Housing Board, were seated.

"SHORT CHANGED"

These witnesses testified that Roche had complained of being short changed by another waiter, who had gone back to the cashier to straighten out the matter. The man who waited on Roche could not be located by the district attorney's office to testify at the trial.

According to the testimony given at the trial McKeough had returned to Roche a one-dollar bill which he had picked up from the floor and which may have fallen from the other waiter's tray.

Roche graduated from Harvard Law School and has an office in Harvard square, Cambridge. For many years he has been active in Cambridge city politics, serving as a councilman and member of the school committee.

Wedding Climaxes School Romance

Culminating a romance which began several years ago when both were students in the Northeastern Law School, Miss Elinor Patterson, of Bloomingdale street, Chelsea, a clerk in the Chelsea city auditor's office, became the bride of James J. Kelleher, of Dorchester, a clerk in the attorney general's office, today at a nuptial mass in Our Lady of Grace Church.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of relatives and friends by the Reverend Thomas A. Walsh.

Quiz in Shooting Of Somerville Man

Two North End men are under arrest and being questioned by Somerville police today in connection with the wounding of a Somerville man, father of three children, in what the trio claim was an accident growing out of a friendly scuffle.

The wounded man, Randolph McMillan, 32, of Perkins street, East Somerville, was reported in critical condition with a bullet wound in his chest at City Hospital.

At Somerville police headquarters, Vincent Papaluca, 30, of Endicott street, is under arrest on a charge of attack with a dangerous weapon, while Emilio Panne, 22, of Thatcher street, is booked on a charge of carrying a loaded revolver without a permit.

MYSTERY OVER KIDNAP CASH

(Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service.)

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 9—Fear grew today that the $28,000 ransom which Dr. W. W. Mattson left "in the woods" was paid to hi-jackers, and that no contact has been made with the actual kidnaper of little Charles Mattson.

At the same time a report that Dr. John F. Condon, the famous "Jafsie" of the Lindbergh case, was en route to the "snatch capital" caused a flurry of excitement throughout Tacoma, and a small army of newspapermen met the train which he was said to have boarded at Portland.

Thorough search of the train, however, revealed no "Jafsie," and the report was believed to have been the result of mistaken identity.

Dr. Mattson appeared very weary and discouraged as the twelfth day since the disappearance of his son drew to an end, with the fate of the 10-year-old boy still unknown.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Human Affections Change As Do the Tides of The Ocean

Cross-Word Puzzle Man

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a widow of 30, and in love with a man three years older. We have been going together for five months.

At first he seemed very much in love with me, but lately he has changed so that he has me thinking whether there might not be another woman. There are times when he seems to be bored with me, and again he seems to be happy in my company.

It seems like a cross-word puzzle to me. "X."

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The above letter is typical of many men and many women. Too often all of us are "Cross-Word Puzzle" people, or at least appear that way to others.

Of course, in every love affair from the time of Adam, when it was decided it was "not good for man to be alone," there has been an ebb and flow in the tide of affections.

The heart cannot be maintained constantly at concert pitch. Consequently it is up to all of us to make the most of the times when our friends seem to be happy with us.

And when our friends do seem a bit remote it is not only good manners, but actual wisdom to avoid plunging into the depths of melancholy and accusing them of loving other people.

If a fiance is "slipping," as the man described above seems to be, there is no more certain way to put him on the "skids" than by making false and unjust accusations.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

When we were married, my husband was 27 and I was ten years older. He imagined I was a year or so older than himself, but never knew the full difference in our ages.

I'm small and slender, and look very young, but I'm worried to death for fear I may break suddenly, look my full age and lose my husband's affection.

He is still very devoted.

OLDER WIFE.

MY DEAR FRIEND:

The very best way to keep young is not to worry about growing old.

And better than all the creaming and steaming, starving and exercising, is a contented mind and having many interests.

Women wither away into old hags long before their time because they have no real interests in their lives beyond trivialities.

Undoubtedly we can keep our bodies younger by taking care of them, and goodness only knows the miracles the beauty parlor has worked since women have come under its sway.

But if you fret and fume, worry over getting old and losing your husband's affection and and harbor envy, jealousy and all uncharitableness, 24 hours a day in the beauty parlor will not stay the [illegible] of time.

Lots of fresh air, lots of sleep, simple food and many interests, you will find to be the most valuable aids.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Every time I think about a letter written to your column by "Discouraged," my blood boils. The idea of a woman being worn out because she does ALL her own work and cares for a two-year-old baby! Why, that is ridiculous. She had no business getting married if she couldn't do those thing and more.

No wonder husbands become rebellious and go off, even by themselves, if wives won't accompany them. This POOR, OVER-WORKED woman could certainly find a few minutes during the day to lie down, if her work were systematized.

This would revive her somewhat so that when her husband came home she could greet him with a smile. This would help them both a lot.

Why should one child take up a woman so completely that she hasn't any time for her husband? My husband and I have been married about seven years. I'm 25 and he is 29. We have two fine boys, one 6 and the other 2. When we are alone together everyone takes us for newlyweds.

Besides our two boys and all the housework (washing, ironing and cooking), I manage an apartment house.

Of course, I would never have a minute to myself if I wasn't systematic. I don't say I don't get tired, but I still enjoy going out once in a while—not every evening.

It gets your mind off yourself.

ANOTHER WIFE.

DEAR READER:

To be able to do all the things you do without getting tired, proves the exception rather than the rule. Some people are born with muscles of iron and others are not.

Having myself looked after children of an age "when they're into everything," my sympathies went out to "Discouraged" who, in addition to minding an active baby, had all the housework to do. BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

How to Keep Thin

CAUSE for worry, Emily, when Jack's eyes stray after a shapely figure.

But can you blame him? Your unwise eating habits have given you unsightly bulges, added 10 years to your figure, made your smartest clothes look dowdy.

Each of those cumbersome extra pounds tells of 4000 calories you ate that your body didn't need. A lot of those calories lurked in the rich holiday cakes, nuts and candies.

Now, to get back your youthful grace, you must eat fewer calories than your body needs. Limiting your diet to 1200 calories a day—including plenty of health-giving vitamins in milk, eggs, fruits, vegetables—will make your body draw on that fat reserve.

When you're trim again, stay that way on 2000 to 2400 calories a day, depending on how tall you are and how active.

A three-day liquid diet jogs you out of calory-cramming habits. Drink all the fruit and vegetable juices you crave. They're low in calories—only 100 in 2 cups tomato juice or 1 cup orange juice or 1 1-3 cups grapefruit juice or 2-3 cup pineapple juice. Stay in bed if you can. If you must be up and about, add buttermilk or skim milk morning and noon.

Now you're ready to start joyfully on the balanced slenderizing menus of our 40-page booklet, "Change Your Weight for Beauty's Sake." It gives two weeks of low-calory menus, a calory chart and exercises for stubborn bulges. Or, if a scrawny figure is your curse, learn to add graceful curves.

Send 15c for our booklet, "Change Your Weight for Beauty's Sake," to Boston Evening American Home Institute, 109 West 19th street, your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Ballet Skirts for Sport Frocks

THERE'S as much whirl in the skirts of the newest sports frocks as there is in your favorite dance dress. Sometimes pleats are stitched down and allowed to swing like kilts . . . sometimes godets are inverted and their umbrella-like outlines are stitched . . . and often the skirt is simply cut hugely flared, as is this one, with emphasis on a slim waist and a smooth hipline.

Pure white with deep, intense color accents is among the brilliant arrivals for southern wear, and that is the scheme of this Fashion Congress selection, modeled by Miss Florence Dysart. "Salyna," a crush-resistant fabric, is used. Intense red, almost maroon, and an indigo blue band the waistline and tie up the high neck with a flat bow on each shoulder. It's a dress for active sports, if you so will it. The blue and marooned-red are repeated in the peasant-tied silk kerchief. The frock is under fifteen dollars. Strawberry Rhubarb Is Herald of Spring

Tender, Juicy Stalks Are No Longer Out-of-Season Luxuries

By MARTHA LEE

SHADES of spring! And winter hasn't even paid us a visit! We saw the loveliest tender strawberry rhubarb on the market at only 15c a pound.

Rhubarb used to spell S-P-R-I-N-G to many of us. Really, we couldn't resist those pink slender stalks with the tender yellow-green leaves. Imagine such a luxury at such a low price!

RHUBARB CUSTARD PIE

1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 eggs
3 cups rhubarb
½ teaspoon nutmeg or 1 teaspoon grated orange rind

Line a pie plate with rich pastry. Mix sugar and cornstarch together, and stir into well-beaten egg yolks. Fill crust with rhubarb cut in ½-inch cubes. Pour sugar mixture over it and sprinkle with nutmeg or orange gratings. Bake in a moderate oven (350 deg. F.) 50 to 60 minutes. Cover with meringue made from the egg whites.

BAKED RHUBARB

Place in a buttered baking dish alternate layers of sliced rhubarb and sugar, using about ½ as much sugar as there is fruit. Dot the layers with butter and sprinkle with grated lemon rind or cinnamon. Have a layer of sugar on top and bake in a slow oven (350 deg. F.) until it is red.

OLIVE MEAT LOAF

1 pound ground beef
½ pound ground veal
½ pound ground pork
1 dozen small or 8 large stuffed olives
½ cup fine bread crumbs
2 eggs
1 tablespoon onion
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon celery salt
1-3 cup water

Mix crumbs, eggs and olives, water and seasonings. Add meat and blend well. Pack in a loaf pan and bake at 325 deg. F. for 1¼ to 1½ hours. Serve with mushroom gravy. More onion may be used if your family like the flavor. Variations in seasoning may be made as well.

POTTED BEEF BALLS

1 pound ground beef flank or chuck
½ pound ground fresh pork shoulder
½ cup uncooked rice
1½ teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper
1 onion
1 carrot
1 cup tomatoes
1 green pepper

Mix beef, pork, salt and pepper and uncooked rice. Shape into small balls and brown well in fat. Place in casserole with onion, carrot, tomato and green pepper chopped very fine. Cover and let bake for one hour in moderate oven, 350 deg. F. Serve from the casserole at the table.

LAMB PATTIE GRILL

1 to 1½ pounds chopped lamb
Salt and pepper
2 cups well-seasoned mashed potatoes
6 to 8 carrots, cooked
Butter

Season lamb with salt and pepper, shape into four patties, place on a buttered oven-proof platter. Arrange halved carrots and mounds of mashed potatoes around the meat. A pastry tube may be used for the potatoes. Brush with melted butter and broil under moderate heat, turning patties once to brown both sides. If patties are more than ½ inch thick, broil one side and turn before placing vegetables on platter. Lamb should broil 12 to 14 minutes.

Play for a Mistake

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

A good defender always counts up, as accurately as possible, declarer's sure and probable tricks. If possible, he determines what declarer's line of play will be—in order to block it.

If nothing can defeat declarer but his own stupidity, a good defender plays even for that. Note how East and West co-operated in allowing South to beat himself in the hand below:

North dealer.

North:
♠ A K
♡ K 5 2
♢ A 10 6 4
♣ A Q 10 6

West:
♠ Q J 9 7 3 2
♡ 9
♢ Q 9 5
♣ J 9 7

East:
♠ 8 6 5 4
♡ A 6 4 3
♢ J 7
♣ K 3 2

South:
♠ 10
♡ Q J 10 8 7
♢ K 8 3 2
♣ 8 5 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 N T	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding was unexceptionable. North's two-notrump rebid properly indicated the strength of his hand; a rebid of three-notrump would have been a slight overbid. South, with a strong five-card suit and good distribution, properly rebid the hearts; and North promptly raised to game.

West led the Queen of spades, dummy winning with the King. A low trump lead was held by South's Queen, and on continuation, East won the third trump and returned another spade.

SOUTH'S MISTAKE

Declarer discarded a club, won with dummy's Ace and led a diamond to the King. Next he drew the last trump and then finessed the diamond ten, a proper use of a standard safety play. South did not mind it a bit when East won with the Jack, for the Ace was sure to drop the Queen. He had merely taken precautions against four to the Queen-Jack in West's hand.

East led a third spade and declarer ruffed with his last trump. The Ace of diamonds dropped the Queen and then the eight of diamonds was cashed.

Both East and West had no trouble in seeing that declarer could cash the Ace of clubs as his tenth trick. The only hope was that he would take the finesse. East, therefore, blanked his King, saving as his last two cards the last spade and the club King. West saved the Jack and nine of clubs.

When South led a club at the 12th trick, West played the Jack. South knew that only three clubs remained out against him and that West held two. Deciding that West had the King and Jack, he finessed dummy's Queen.

It will be a long time before that South player again finesses for an extra trick!

MADGE RACES TO CATCH BOYS IN RUNAWAY CAR

CHAPTER 196

I HAVE heard of people living a lifetime in a minute, but it seemed to me that all eternity passed over my head in the fraction of a second following Mary's exclamation that the car in which Roderick and Junior were seated was moving down the road.

It was true! My own eyes confirmed her words. Slowly, as if moving in first gear, the car was traveling away from the place where Williams had left it!

From behind us came a raucous, shouting command.

"Mrs. Graham! Get in your car and start it. You're the best driver, and it's the fastest car. I'll be with you by the time you have it started. Mrs. Veritzen, follow behind us, and not too close."

It was the voice of Williams.

"I can't see them anywhere," I cried frantically as the motor responded to the switch key.

WILLIAMS HAS PLAN

He had closed the outside door, and was crouched on the running board, the window down so that I could hear what he said.

"Don't sound the horn," he said, "unless I tell you to," and though his voice was apparently unemotional, I sensed with panic the very real uneasiness which was his.

"There they are!" I gasped as we rounded the third turn in the winding road and saw the car going down the road in much the same wobbly fashion as if a drunken man were driving it.

"Thank heavens! Lightning hasn't struck yet," he said.

"Yes," I answered, finding difficulty in enunciating even the shortest syllable.

"Of course you'll have to slow up and turn in after them if another car appears. Or! Good Lord!"

Foods Containing Iron Will Keep Your Spirits Up

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Be wary of any diet lacking normal amounts of these protective foods, for on such a diet you lose your looks and temper. A reducing diet is a reduced diet, but the cut is in calories only.

All excess fat represents surplus calories, which must be reconverted into energy in the process of reducing. But, remember, you have no reserve to draw upon for the protective foods, and these must be supplied daily.

When you cut calories recklessly, the menu is more than likely to be injuriously low in protein and iron, and lacking in calcium and phosphorus, and the vitamins so essential to health and beauty.

It is quite easy to unbalance your diet while cutting calories. A prolonged diet deficient in eggs and meat (sources of protein and iron) leaves you weak and ill-tempered. It has been said that a cranky woman can be sweetened with a bit of iron. Keep your disposition intact by the inclusion of these foods in the menu: Eggs, meat, green vegetables, and whole grains.

Fruits and vegetables supply minerals, vitamins and beauty. You need at least two fresh fruits, two cooked vegetables and one raw vegetable daily. One vegetable should be of the green, leafy kind.

THOUSAND CALORIE BALANCED MENU

BREAKFAST	CALORIES
Orange juice, ½ glass	50
Toast, 2 thin slices (whole wheat)	100
Butter, ½ pat	50

LUNCHEON
Scrambled eggs, 2	200
Spinach, 1 cup	25
Sliced or stewed tomatoes	35
Skimmed milk or buttermilk	80

DINNER
Cubed steak, broiled	200
String beans, 1 cup	30
Carrots, 1 cup	40
Butter, 1 level tsp.	33
Pumpkin pie, 3 inches	200
Demi-tasse	..
	503
TOTAL CALORIES	1043

Leaving milk out of the menu decreases the calcium and phosphorus intake. You don't want to lose your teeth as you lose weight. Note to Overweights: Use of buttermilk and skimmed milk thins out the calories without deleting calcium, phosphorus, or protein. The disadvantage is that Vitamin A is taken out with the cream or butter fat.

The reducer's menu must necessarily be shy of excess butter, cream, whole milk and other fats, but this also lessens the Vitamin A content. The low calorie, high Vitamin A foods which the reducer must cultivate are carrots, apricots, spinach, beef liver, eggs and turnip greens.

If you catch cold easily and are also one who must continually restrict your calories, it is an excellent dietetic plan to use a Vitamin A capsule daily. The calorie content of these capsules is negligible, and they afford the reducer protection against the danger of low resistance to colds and respiratory infection.

Summing it up—as the diet is reduced the protective foods can all be included in the daily Thousand Calorie Menu which should be adopted for the balance of the week. Later, if your reducing calories permit, you can have a wider choice of foods.

This smart new material appears in a chubby greatcoat, a flaring swagger and a fitted tunic coat, which may be worn equally well in town or country, for day or evening. Recommended for bitter winter days is a black broadcloth frock and black ankle high boots, dramatically contrasted with a short reefer of white lambskin and matching fur toque.

Mrs. Frederic B. Winthrop Hostess At First of Dancing Parties

By BETTY ALDEN

NEARLY THREE HUNDRED socially prominent guests attended the dancing party at Mrs. Frederic B. Winthrop's mansion on Berkeley street last evening . . . all the downstairs rooms were cleared for dancing and the soft gleam from candles and crystal chandeliers made a pleasing silhouette of the ladies' silks and satins against their escorts' more sober black and white . . .

Mrs. Samuel Batchelder

Sixteen hostesses joined hands in making the evening a great success . . . each of the sixteen gave a dinner party beforehand and then whisked their guests off to Mrs. Winthrop's for dancing . . .

Among the dancers were Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence, Jr., who will assist the latter's mother, Mrs. Edward Brandegee, in giving the next dance in this exclusive series, at her estate in Chestnut Hill on February 5 . . . Mrs. Lawrence, Jr., wore a billowy gown of ivory tulle with a coronet of gold flowers in her hair . . . Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Dearborn, Jr., attended with a group of the young "horsey" crowd in which they are so prominent . . . Mrs. Josiah Childs was gowned in emerald green taffeta with a velvet swagger jacket of the same shade, and Mrs. Sam Batchelder, who attended the dinner party which the William Coxes, the Robert Emmons and the Freddie Churches gave together at the Chilton Club, wore pale blue and silver brocade with puff sleeves and low square neckline.

Burgundy red was the dominant color of the ladies' gowns . . . Mrs. James Parker, 2d, chose it in net with a full billowy skirt edged with a deep band of dusty pink . . . Mrs. John Tuckerman wore the same color in chiffon with a long soft train and a short ermine cape . . . Mrs. Harvey Bundy's gown was burgundy net with horizontal bands of matching velvet on the skirt . . . Taffeta, fashioned with little ruffles all down the skirt, was Mrs. Christian Herter's version of the burgundy fashion and Mrs. George Saltonstall West's was a very full skirted model of net with a tight fitting bodice and a three quarter wrap of ermine, made with deep scallops around the hem . . .

Mrs. Nathaniel Winthrop, who is here visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Bartlett, was one of the dinner guests at the Chilton Club and wore powder blue velvet to set off her light blonde curls . . . Her sister-in-law, Katharine Winthrop, daughter of the hostess for the dance, was gowned in wine satin with a band of gold around the hem . . . Mrs. William C. Cox chose a model of silver and white flowered lame and Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Jr.'s ivory gown was printed with a gay floral pattern . . .

Dog Club Plans Annual Meeting

Members of the Ladies Dog Club are taking no chances on the weather continuing as warm and unseasonable as it has been for the past few weeks . . . and have decided once again to omit the outdoor dog show in the Public Gardens, which they gave for three winters as a sort of pre-view of the Eastern Dog Club's annual Washington's Birthday show at Mechanics Hall . . .

For three winters these shows proved very entertaining and instructive to onlookers . . . though much too uncomfortable an ordeal for feminine owners of blue blooded dogs who had to lead their pets around all morning in piercing mid-winter weather . . .

This year, the ladies are making a very special event of their annual meeting on January 19 at 3 P. M., at the Copley-Plaza . . . After the election of officers and other business is completed, they will have a program of movies reviewing the events of the Dog Club for the past five or six years . . . showing moving pictures of their outdoor shows in the Gardens, as well as the annual June shows at the Winsor School grounds . . . Since most of the members have never seen the movies, the program will prove unusually interesting . . . and will be followed by tea and a chance to talk over plans for donating a silver trophy to be used as one of the awards at the Eastern Dog Club's show next month . . .

Miss Jean G. Hinkle will be hostess at the social gathering following the business meeting . . . and others to be present are Mrs. Albert Geiger, president . . . Miss Frances Porter, secretary and treasurer . . . Mrs. Walter L. McCammon of Weston, second vice president; Mrs. Guy Warren Walker, Jr., Mrs. Francis V. Crane, Mrs. Herbert Bramwell Shaw, Mrs. Gilbert Steward, Mrs. DeForest Danielson and Mrs. William B. Long . . .

Open Toe Evening Slippers Demand Foot Beauty

By DONNA GRACE

WHEN we took this country away from the Indians we should have been smart enough to appropriate their styles in footwear, too. They have very stylish modes in shoes in their way, and they never find it necessary to sacrifice comfort for style.

When they need a shoe for formal dress they just add a few more beads to the regular moccasin and there they are all dressed up. With us it is quite different. We have changed the primitive styles, for long ago we became intrigued with the style of heels on shoes, and ever since the first heel appeared we have been changing the vogue of footwear.

The present styles, however, afford more real foot comfort than any we have ever known so far—that is for the combination of style and comfort, too.

The open toe evening slippers do not add to the foot comfort, but they should be just as easy on the feet as the other styles of foot gear, provided the open part does not cut or bind the toes. The foot will push forward a little and the opening must be just right for comfort. This will be taken care of in the fitting.

Do not make the mistake of manicuring the toe nails. The manicure business belongs to the hand treatment. We pedicure the feet. The big difference is in the way we file or cut the nails. The toe nails are never cut or filed pointed or oval. They should be filed straight across and not down at the sides as a protection to the sensitive tips of the toes. Good square toe nails may be very beautiful and will give the feet a balanced shape.

Bathe the feet well every day and massage them with a good cream to keep them smooth and white. If there is the least dryness about the nails or cuticle rub them with lanolin. It will keep them smooth and prevent the ridges and hang nails that mar the beauty of the nice looking nail.

Perspiring feet may be relieved by sponging them with a 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride. Then use any of the foot dusting powders. Add a little borax to the foot bath, and when the feet are swollen, bathe them in an epsom salt bath.

Go to a chiropodist regularly if your feet need treatment. Always use your orange wood stick to keep the sides clean and cuticle pushed back. Use your file on the callouses, but never shave them too thin. When there is a troublesome callous remove as much as possible without irritating the skin. Then soak the feet in the epsom salt solution or a good lather of soap and warm water. Rinse and dry them, and then you may put a little piece of adhesive over the calloused part for a while.

Send for the Foot Treatment if you wish. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope and address Donna Grace, Boston Evening American.

Bundles of Clothing Admit Guests at Dance

VIRGINIA FOUHY (Photos from International News Photograph Service) PEGGY FOUHY MARY DEVINE

A CONSIDERABLE AMOUNT of clothing for the needy was obtained as the result of the fifth annual dance of the Federation of College Catholic Clubs, held at the Walker Memorial at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology last night, when each guest donated a bundle of clothing as the price of admission. Virginia Fouhy, Peggy Fouhy and Mary Devine, all of Belmont, are shown with some of the bundles.

Dinners Will Precede Dance

A WHIRL of dinner parties is preceding the Junior Philomatheia supper dance next Friday evening at the Copley-Plaza.

Ann and Mary Holland of Jamaica Plain, whose mother, Mrs. Daniel J. Holland, is chairman of the ball, will entertain at dinner before the dance. Virginia Grimes of Chestnut Hill is inviting guests to her home before bringing them to the ball and Mary Vaas, daughter of Mrs. Joseph Vaas, will be hostess at dinner.

Others entertaining include Mary Rita and Peggy Fouhy, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William Fouhy and Marjorie Sullivan, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. G. Frank Sullivan of Brookline.

The engagement of Virginia Marie Cole, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William F. Cole of Quincy to Gilbert Kenneth Nickerson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Nickerson of Squantum, is being formally announced by the bride-elect's sisters, Eileen and Daurive Cole at a tea this afternoon at their home, 48 Brighton avenue, Allston.

Monday evening, January 25, will be a night of nights for members of the West Roxbury Catholic Club when the group gathers in the Louis XIV ballroom of the Hotel Somerset for an evening of dining and dancing.

Mrs. Thomas Clifford, the club's president, has appointed Mrs. Andrew MacDonnell as chairman.

Alma Wilson Weds T. A. Wheeler

Miss Alma Lackey Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Bright Wilson of New York and Washington, D. C., was married yesterday afternoon in the Perroquet Suite of the Waldorf-Astoria, to T. Ames Wheeler, son of Professor and Mrs. Carleton Ames Wheeler of Tufts College, and Peterboro, New Hampshire.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a princess gown of ivory white velvet with a cowl neck, full sleeves buttoned tight below the elbow, and a long train. Her long veil was caught to a pleated tulle cap by fresh gardenias and she carried a sheaf of calla lilies.

Mrs. William S. Cutchins of Louisville, Kentucky, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She was gowned in deep rose moire and carried a bouquet of roses. Coburn T. Wheeler was best man for his brother.

Following the marriage there was a wedding reception in the Perroquet Suite. The bride's mother, whose gown was of black crepe with a cape embroidered in silver, was assisted in receiving the guests by Mrs. Carleton Ames Wheeler, mother of the groom. Her gown was also black, embroidered in gold.

Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler will spend their honeymoon in Bermuda. Upon their return they will make their home in Detroit, Michigan.

Infections of Ear Canal

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

"PLEASE tell me the cause of the itching I have inside my ears. It never lets up and disturbs my sleep and rest. I have tried various remedies but without success."

This request came to me in a recent mail. It is similar to several inquiries I have received within the past month.

It is difficult to give a satisfactory answer because the itching may result from one of several causes. For this reason it is necessary to go somewhat into detail in order to understand why so common a thing as itching of the ears has so many causes.

The sensation of itching in the "external auditory canal," the outside passage way to the ear, may be due to a local infection or inflammation, or it may be the result of some constitutional disturbance. In a majority of cases, children who suffer from the condition are victims of local skin irritations, such as eczema. This may be the case in adults.

HAS MANY CAUSES

The itching may result from a lack of cleanliness or misplaced efforts at cleanliness. Many persons are careless about permitting water to enter the ear canal and forget to dry and remove it. It is common knowledge that when the skin is in contact with water for any length of time, inflammation and itching follow.

The irritation may result from the accumulation of "cerumen," ear wax, in the canal. It may have been collecting there over a period of months or even years without producing symptoms. But sooner or later it is likely to to lead to itching or eczema, and with the fussing to remove it, it may be followed by repeated boils in the canal.

As I have said, this annoying affliction may bother adults who suffer from some constitutional disorder. It sometimes occurs in such general debilitating conditions as diabetes, Bright's disease and tuberculosis.

It is sometimes a symptom met in advanced age. It results, too, from changes in the circulation of the blood. Then again it may follow the absorption of toxins or poisons from within the system.

I have noted that itching, eczema and boils of the ear canal are more commonly found in women than in men. This may be due to insufficient exposure to light, air and direct rays of the sun. It may also follow excessive cleanliness of the ear canal, which result in irritation of the more delicate skin of women.

A GREAT AUTHOR'S STORY OF LOVE VS. DUTY

SYNOPSIS

Just prior to the operation, Dr. Endicott receives a telephone message, the result of which causes him to blunder tragically. The patient, the rich and cultured Mrs. Dexter, dies on the operating table.

Dr. Paige takes the blame for the error, and rushes out of the hospital distraught at the tragic climax.

Hurrying home, he seeks solace in cognac. Later deciding that his usefulness at Parkway is at an end, he writes a letter to his attorney, and, with his Irish setter Sylvia, sets out to lose himself in the world at large.

CHAPTER 4

"But I would like to know one thing," said Paige, when the whiskey had lifted his fog a little, "how did the girl—and her father—bear up? I didn't see them afterward. Wasn't quite man enough to face 'em."

Booth and Raymond exchanged glances, each waiting for the other to invent an acceptable lie. Then Bennie shook his head; but Rayburn, noting that Newell had caught them in the act of conference, plunged into the truth.

"It has been kind of a complicated affair," he began ponderously. "Of course you've been laid up and haven't seen the evening papers. There was a terrific crash in the stock market today. The whole town is shocked. This man Dexter appears to have been cleaned out, along with a half-million other well-to-dos. Lost his shirt.

"That—on top of this accident at the hospital—or this on top of that—was a little too much for him. So he pushed off, this afternoon, about five. Not a very neat job. Didn't know his anatomy in the cardiac zone. Lived for a couple of hours."

"He means Dexter was," Rayburn explained, hopeful of lifting Newell's dejection.

"Damned silly remark," growled Paige sullenly. "And what became of the girl? Is she dead, too?"

"Oh, no; we put her to bed, over at Parkway, and sprinkled a little poppy-dust over her worries," replied Rayburn, pleased to be making an encouraging report.

"But she had herself pretty well in hand, considering everything she'd been through: father and mother both dead and the family stony broke—all in the course of about eight hours. Took it with her chin up. Maybe she was just stunned.

"Didn't want to go to bed. We thought she'd better. We sent some telegrams for her, including a cable to her sister; addressed it to the young woman who is with her sister in London."

"Dr. Endicott about?" inquired Paige thickly.

"Huh!" snorted Bennie. "That bird!" Instantly aware of the injudicious slip he added promptly: "I dare say he was busy. He had had a hard day. They say he took an awful beating in the market collapse."

He Goes Away

Newell shut off this criticism with the surly comment that he didn't care to hear any panning of Dr. Endicott, denouncing Bennie for a drunken fool who ought to have his envy under better control. To clear the air of this slight disharmony, they made another highball.

At four-thirty, Paige awoke, bewilderedly took stock of his position. Reviving himself with another glass of cognac, he wrote a brief, business-like letter to his valued friend, Eugene Corsley, junior member of the firm of attorneys who had long since handled his affairs and his father's before him, confident that his secret would be kept and his instructions meticulously obeyed.

He left the letter, sealed and stamped, on the library table, and dressed quickly in a rough suit of tweeds and well-worn hiking shoes.

* * *

Miss Arlen and Phyllis saw them off on the Berengaria and took the noon char-a-banc back to London.

It was pleasant to think that they were to have six weeks of leisurely browsing about together after the seventy-two hot and helter-skelter days on the Continent. Phyllis, especially, had reasons for anticipating this experience with pleasant excitement.

Before the week was out, it had been arranged that if Phyllis could secure consent from home she would remain for a few weeks in London with Miss Arlen, who had contrived a four months' leave to study in the British Museum.

Had it occurred to either of them, through those enchanted days, to compute in terms of years their respective contributions to the diminishing of the distance which naturally lay between them, it would have been incorrect to think that they had settled upon a relationship midway in mood between 22 and 35.

Miss Arlen had, indeed, recovered something of her youth, but to a more marked degree had Phyllis achieved maturity. The attractive girl had had her little problems, but they had been of cartilaginous structure. She had bruised easily and painfully, but repair was prompt and complete. She had never seen a compound fracture of lime-hardened bones. Not until now. Miss Arlen had not uncovered her scars with a morbid wish to shock, or a self-piteous bid for commiseration.

With cool unconcern she had exposed her irreparable injuries, and Phyllis had grown almost to full stature at the sight. She had even ventured to offer a possible remedy.

The disclosure had come about naturally enough. They had been strolling through the Cathedral grounds at Salisbury on a brown-and-gold mid-October afternoon.

Her Tragedy

"I'm not unwilling to tell you. It is quite a long story, though." Pat deliberated a suitable beginning. After a moment's reflection with averted eyes, she said calmly, "He fell in love with my sister."

Phyllis winced and gave a quick little breath of pained surprise, but offered no comment, for it was to be quite a long story and she must not interrupt. She waited, with startled eyes.

"That's all," said Pat, in the same tone Phyllis had often heard her use when dismissing a class. "That's all—except that the invitations were out and the presents were coming in—and I found them in each other's arms when I came down to the library to show him my new traveling suit—and my favorite brother fought him and was hurt—and I ran away where they couldn't find me for ever so long—and they were married, and there are children I have never seen—and my mother lives with them—and all my people are in the same town—and I can't go home."

"Oh—my dear!" sympathized Phyllis. "How can you bear it?"

"I can't," replied Pat woodenly. "That's the trouble. The effort to bear it has frozen me."

"But you aren't Pat!" Phyllis brightened hopefully. "I never felt so close to anyone, outside my own family."

"I know, dear. I have been very selfish, warming myself at your bright fire. I'm surprised it hasn't chilled you. It really has been a Godsend to me—much more than you realize."

"I do wish you could talk with my mother," she said, searching the heavy eyes with loyal concern. "She has helped so many people. You'd be surprised."

"Nothing would help me, Phyllis, but utter forgetfulness of it all. Your mother couldn't help me to that, however kindly she might try."

"But that's just it!" exulted Phyllis. "She does it! It's something our Dean taught her when my little brother was drowned. I was only a baby then, so my mother has always had it, ever since I can remember."

"I mean—this thing that I'm thinking about isn't religion; heaps bigger and more important than that. I'll try to tell you. But it won't be easy. You see—I've never been hurt. You have to be, I think, before it means very much.

Phyllis Talks

"Perhaps I could qualify," said Pat dryly. "Let's have it."

For more than two hours they sat on the grey stone bench at the entrance to the cloister. Phyllis was conscious, all the time, that she was making a very poor job of it; and when, at last, her vague ideas were exhausted, an extended silence meant nothing other than that Pat had remained unconvinced and unstirred.

"I think you get just a flash of it," pursued Phyllis, unwilling to surrender—"not the real essence of it, of course, but just a faint glimpse, among these old things we've been seeing lately. I've thought about it, a lot.

"Remember the other day when we were down at Saint Olave's, sitting there in the dusky gloom, looking up at the bust of Elizabeth Pepys? And you had just been talking about all she and Sam had been through; the London fire, the plague, the smashup of two governments, the frights, the flights, the shocks, the sorrows; and there she was, so calm, so secure; and — outside in the street—you could hear it pouring in through the open door—the dull mutter and rumble of traffic mumbling, 'On, on, on, on' —and you could hear the measured plop-plop of big shaggy hoofs on the cobblestone?

The Junior Birdmen Of America

Today's Pilots of Models—Tomorrow's Model Pilots

By L. F. ROSS
Boston Wing Commander

Believing the early bird catches the worm, the Flying Jeeps squadron of Cambridge has taken off to win the Boston wing honor banner awarded every three months to the most active flight unit. Stanley Stanwick is commander and Norman Berg is captain of the squadron.

Stanley Stanwick

Its first move to win points was a contest held today in the armory at 120 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, for Baby R. O. G. models and gliders. The competition was arranged by the contest committee, consisting of the officers, and was open to all Birdmen.

The honor banner, about the size of the top of the average office desk, is made of blue satin, embroidered in gold, white and red silk, bearing the Junior Birdmen insignia and is mounted on a brass rod with gold cord and tassels.

It was awarded for the fourth consecutive time on January 1 to the Flying Hawks of Dorchester, commanded by Arnold Zetterlund. The new race closes on April 1.

The winner of this banner, a handsome addition to the headquarters of any flight squadron, is decided by means of a point system with points awarded for meetings, early dispatch of reports, inter-squadron contests, new members, Eagle ratings, visits to airports and other aviation activities.

The Bay State Patrol Squadron, New Bedford, commanded by Joseph Giammatteo; Mystery Aces of Granby, Que., commanded by "Jory" Nixon; Lucky Seven Model Club of Livermore Falls, Me., commanded by William H. Jacques; Devils Squadron of Greystone, R. I., commanded by Donald Campbell, and the East Boston Aces, commanded by Joseph Iorio.

These units and the following have points to their credit already in the current race: Sky Kings of Medway, Me., commanded by Virgil Cole; Flying Aces of Ballardvale, commanded by John Shepard, and the Floyd Bennett Squadron of Worcester, commanded by Joseph Liberty.

A copy of the point system sheet, providing details of the honor banner award, will be sent to any squadron upon request to wing headquarters, 100 Summer street, Boston.

The Brookline High School Aero Club plans a reorganization and re-enlivenment program that will include a meeting to elect new officers, plans for model building classes, squadron and inter-squadron contests and trips to airports.

Stephen is an ardent Birdman and aviation enthusiast and is looking forward to the aeronautical engineering course at M. I. T. after completing high school. He has worked at airports and hopes to spend his time at one this summer when his brother, David, plans to open flying service in Lowell.

Arthur Lassonde of Concord has expressed his intention of building an R. O. G. stick model by sending in his order for the Junior Birdmen Library booklet, "How to Build a Beginner's Flying Model."

The handbook and the remaining 11 in the series is obtained by sending ten cents in stamps for each copy to the Junior Birdmen Library Bureau, 7 Central Park West, New York City.

Seven new members at least start the new year with the Red Knights Squadron of Chelsea commanded by George Spicer and captained by Earl C. Baggs. They are:

John Reynolds, Edward Stahlow, Robert Hope, Clarence Martin, George Kelley, and the commander.

A thorough reorganization of business, a membership campaign, the introduction of a merit system and plans for model building and flying are expected to make this one of the most active groups in the Boston wing.

By BETTY ALDEN

NEARLY THREE HUNDRED socially prominent guests attended the dancing party at Mrs. Frederic B. Winthrop's mansion on Berkeley street last evening . . . all the downstairs rooms were cleared for dancing and the soft gleam from candles and crystal chandeliers made a pleasing silhouette of the ladies' silks and satins against their escorts' more sober black and white . . .

Mrs. Samuel Batchelder

Sixteen hostesses joined hands in making the evening a great success . . . each of the sixteen gave a dinner party beforehand and then whisked their guests off to Mrs. Winthrop's for dancing . . .

Among the dancers were Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence, Jr., who will assist the latter's mother, Mrs. Edward Brandegee, in giving the next dance in this exclusive series, at her estate in Chestnut Hill on February 5 . . . Mrs. Lawrence, Jr., wore a billowy gown of ivory tulle with a coronet of gold flowers in her hair . . . Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Dearborn, Jr., attended with a group of the young "hotsey" crowd in which they are so prominent . . . Mrs. Josiah Childs was gowned in emerald green taffeta with a velvet swagger jacket of the same shade, and Mrs. Sam Batchelder, who attended the dinner party which the William Coxes, the Robert Emmons and the Freddie Churches gave together at the Chilton Club, wore pale blue and silver brocade with puff sleeves and low square neckline . . .

Burgundy red was the dominant color of the ladies' gowns . . . Mrs. James Parker, 2d, chose it in net with a full billowy skirt edged with a deep band of dusty pink . . . Mrs. John Tuckerman wore the same color in chiffon with a long soft train and a short ermine cape . . . Mrs. Harvey Bundy's gown was burgundy net with horizontal bands of matching velvet on the skirt . . . Taffeta, fashioned with little ruffles all down the skirt, was Mrs. Christian Herter's version of the burgundy fashion and Mrs. George Saltonstall West's was a very full shirted model of net with a tight fitting bodice and a three quarter wrap of ermine, made with deep scallops around the hem . . .

Dog Club Plans Annual Meeting

Members of the Ladies Dog Club are taking no chances on the weather continuing as warm and unseasonable as it has been for the past few weeks . . . and have decided once again to omit the outdoor dog show in the Public Gardens, which they gave for three winters as a sort of pre-view of the Eastern Dog Club's annual Washington's Birthday show at Mechanics Hall . . .

For three winters these shows proved very entertaining and instructive to onlookers . . . though much too uncomfortable an ordeal for feminine owners of blue blooded dogs who had to lead their pets around all morning in piercing mid-winter weather . . .

This year the ladies are making a very special event of their annual meeting on January 19 at 3 P. M., at the Copley-Plaza . . . After the election of officers and other business is completed, they will have a program of movies reviewing the events of the Dog Club for the past five or six years . . . showing moving pictures of their outdoor shows in the Gardens, as well as the annual June shows at the Winsor School grounds . . . Since most of the members have never seen the movies, the program will prove unusually interesting . . . and will be followed by tea and a chance to talk over plans for donating a silver trophy to be used as one of the awards at the Eastern Dog Club's show next month . . .

Miss Jean G. Hinkle will be hostess at the social gathering following the business meeting . . . and others to be present are Mrs. Albert Geiger, president . . . Miss Frances Porter, secretary and treasurer . . . Mrs. Walter L. McCammon of Weston, second vice president; Mrs. Guy Warren Walker, Jr., Mrs. Francis V. Crane, Mrs. Herbert Bramwell Shaw, Mrs. Gilbert Steward, Mrs. DeForest Danielson, and Mrs. William B. Long . . .

Open Toe Evening Slippers Demand Foot Beauty

By DONNA GRACE

WHEN we took this country away from the Indians we should have been smart enough to appropriate their styles in footwear, too. They have very stylish modes in shoes in their way, and they never find it necessary to sacrifice comfort for style.

When they need a shoe for formal dress they just add a few more beads to the regular moccasin and there they are—all dressed up. With us it is quite different. We have changed the primitive styles, for long ago we became intrigued with the style of heels on shoes, and ever since the first heel appeared we have been changing the vogue of footwear.

The present styles, however, afford more real foot comfort than any we have ever known so far—that is for the combination of style and comfort, too.

The open toe evening slippers do not add to the foot comfort, but they should be just as easy on the feet as the other styles of foot gear, provided the open part does not cut or bind the toes. The foot will push forward a little and the opening must be just right for comfort. This will be taken care of in the fitting.

Do not make the mistake of manicuring the toe nails. The manicure business belongs to the hand treatment. We pedicure the feet. The big difference is in the way we file or cut the nails. The toe nails are never cut or filed pointed or oval. They should be filed straight across and not down at the sides as a protection to the sensitive tips of the toes. Good square toe nails may be very beautiful and will give the feet a balanced shape.

Bathe the feet well every day and massage them with a good cream to keep them smooth and white. If there is the least dryness about the nails or cuticle rub them with lanolin. It will keep them smooth and prevent the ridges and hang nails that mar the beauty of the nice looking nail.

Perspiring feet may be relieved by sponging them with a 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride. Then use any of the foot dusting powders. Add a little borax to the foot bath, and when the feet are swollen, bathe them in an epsom salt bath.

Go to a chiropodist regularly if your feet need treatment. Always use your orange wood stick to keep the sides clean and cuticle pushed back. Use your file on the callouses but never shave them too thin. When there is a troublesome callous remove as much as possible without irritating the skin. Then soak the feet in the epsom salt solution or a good lather of soap and warm water. Rinse and dry them, and then you may put a little piece of adhesive over the calloused part for a while.

Send for the Foot Treatment if you wish. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope and address Donna Grace, Boston Evening American.

Dinners Will Precede Dance

Ann and Mary Holland of Jamaica Plain, whose mother, Mrs. Daniel J. Holland, is chairman of the ball, will entertain at dinner before the dance. Virginia Grimes of Chestnut Hill is inviting guests to her home before bringing them to the ball and Mary Vaas, daughter of Mrs. Joseph Vaas, will be hostess at dinner.

Others entertaining include Mary Rita and Peggy Fouhy, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William Fouhy, and Marjorie Sullivan, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. G. Frank Sullivan of Brookline.

* * *

The engagement of Virginia Marie Cole, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William F. Cole of Quincy to Gilbert Kenneth Nickerson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Nickerson of Squantum, is being formally announced by the bride-elect's sisters, Eileen and Daurive Cole at a tea this afternoon at their home, 48 Brighton avenue, Allston.

* * *

Monday evening, January 25, will be a night of nights for members of the West Roxbury Catholic Club when the group gathers in the Louis XIV ballroom of the Hotel Somerset for an evening of dining and dancing.

Mrs. Thomas Clifford, the club's president, has appointed Mrs. Andrew MacDonnell as chairman.

Alma Wilson Weds T. A. Wheeler

Miss Alma Lackey Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Bright Wilson of New York and Washington, D. C., was married yesterday afternoon in the Perroquet Suite of the Waldorf-Astoria, to T. Ames Wheeler, son of Professor and Mrs. Carleton Ames Wheeler of Tufts College, and Peterboro, New Hampshire.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a princess gown of ivory white velvet with a cowl neck, full sleeves buttoned tight below the elbow, and a long train. Her long veil was caught to a pleated tulle cap by fresh gardenias and she carried a sheaf of calla lilies.

Mrs. William S. Cutchins of Louisville, Kentucky, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She was gowned in deep rose moire and carried a bouquet of roses. Coburn T. Wheeler was best man for his brother.

Following the marriage there was a wedding reception in the Perroquet Suite. The bride's mother, whose gown was of black crepe with a cape embroidered in silver, was assisted in receiving the guests by Mrs. Carleton Ames Wheeler, mother of the groom. Her gown was also black, embroidered in gold.

Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler will spend their honeymoon in Bermuda. Upon their return they will make their home in Detroit, Michigan.

Infections of Ear Canal

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

"PLEASE tell me the cause of the itching I have inside my ears. It never lets up and disturbs my sleep and rest. I have tried various remedies but without success."

This request came to me in a recent mail. It is similar to several inquiries I have received within the past month.

It is difficult to give a satisfactory answer because the itching may result from one of several causes. For this reason it is necessary to go somewhat into detail in order to understand why so common a thing as itching of the ears has so many causes.

The sensation of itching in the "external auditory canal," the outside passage way to the ear, may be due to a local infection or inflammation, or it may be the result of some constitutional disturbance. In a majority of cases, children who suffer from the condition are victims of local skin irritations, such as eczema. This may be the case in adults.

HAS MANY CAUSES

The itching may result from a lack of cleanliness or misplaced efforts at cleanliness. Many persons are careless about permitting water to enter the ear canal and forget to dry and remove it. It is common knowledge that when the skin is in contact with water for any length of time, inflammation and itching follow.

The irritation may result from the accumulation of "cerumen," ear wax, in the canal. It may have been collecting there over a period of months or even years without producing symptoms. But sooner or later it is likely to to lead to itching or eczema, and with the fussing to remove it, it may be followed by repeated boils in the canal.

As I have said, this annoying affliction may bother adults who suffer from some constitutional disorder. It sometimes occurs in such general debilitating conditions as diabetes, Bright's disease and tuberculosis.

It is sometimes a symptom met in advanced age. It results, too, from changes in the circulation of the blood. Then again it may follow the absorption of toxins or poisons from within the system.

I have noted that itching, eczema, and boils of the ear canal are more commonly found in women than in men. This may be due to insufficient exposure to light, air and direct rays of the sun. It may also follow excessive cleanliness of the ear canal, which result in irritation of the more delicate skin of women.

'Green Light'

SYNOPSIS

Just prior to the operation, Dr. Endicott receives a telephone message, the result of which causes him to blunder tragically. The patient, the rich and cultured Mrs. Dexter, dies on the operating table.

Hurrying home, he seeks solace in cognac. Later deciding that his usefulness at Parkway is at an end, he writes a letter to his attorney, and, with his Irish setter Sylvia, sets out to lose himself in the world at large.

CHAPTER 4

"But I would like to know one thing," said Paige, when the whiskey had lifted his fog a little, "how did the girl—and her father—bear up? I didn't see them afterward. Wasn't quite man enough to face 'em."

Booth and Raymond exchanged glances, each waiting for the other to invent an acceptable lie. Then Bennie shook his head; but Rayburn, noting that Newell had caught them in the act of conference, plunged into the truth.

"It has been kind of a complicated affair," he began ponderously. "Of course you've been laid up and haven't seen the evening papers. There was a terrific crash in the stock market today. The whole town is shocked. This man Dexter appears to have been cleaned out, along with a half-million other well-to-dos. Lost his shirt.

"That—on top of this accident at the hospital—or this on top of that—was a little too much for him. So he pushed off, this afternoon, about five. Not a very neat job. Didn't know his anatomy in the cardiac zone. Lived for a couple of hours."

"He means Dexter was," Rayburn explained, hopeful of lifting Newell's dejection.

"Damned silly remark," growled Paige sullenly. "And what became of the girl? Is she dead, too?"

"Oh, no; we put her to bed, over at Parkway, and sprinkled a little poppy-dust over her worries," replied Rayburn, pleased to be making an encouraging report.

"But she had herself pretty well in hand, considering everything she'd been through: father and mother both dead and the family stony broke—all in the course of about eight hours. Took it with her chin up. Maybe she was just stunned.

"Didn't want to go to bed. We thought she'd better. We sent some telegrams for her, including a cable to her sister; addressed it to the young woman who is with her sister in London."

"Dr. Endicott about?" inquired Paige thickly.

"Huh!" snorted Bennie. "That bird!" Instantly aware of the injudicious slip he added promptly: "I dare say he was busy. He had had a hard day. They say he took an awful beating in the market collapse."

He Goes Away

Newell shut off this criticism with the surly comment that he didn't care to hear any panning of Dr. Endicott, denouncing Bennie for a drunken fool who ought to have his envy under better control. To clear the air of this slight disharmony, they made another highball.

At four-thirty, Paige awoke, bewilderedly took stock of his position. Reviving himself with another glass of cognac, he wrote a brief, business-like letter to his valued friend, Eugene Corley, junior member of the firm of attorneys who had long since handled his affairs and his father's before him, confident that his secret would be kept and his instructions meticulously obeyed.

He left the letter, sealed and stamped, on the library table, and dressed quickly in a rough suit of tweeds and well-worn hiking shoes.

* * *

Miss Arlen and Phyllis saw them off on the Berengaria and took the noon char-a-banc back to London.

It was pleasant to think that they were to have six weeks of leisurely browsing about together after the seventy-two hot and helter-skelter days on the Continent. Phyllis, especially, had reasons for anticipating this experience with pleasant excitement.

Before the week was out, it had been arranged that if Phyllis could secure consent from home she would remain for a few weeks in London with Miss Arlen, who had contrived a four months' leave to study in the British Museum.

Had it occurred to either of them, through those enchanted days, to compute in terms of years their respective contributions to the diminishing of the distance which naturally lay between them, it would have been incorrect to think that they had settled upon a relationship midway in mood between 22 and 35.

Miss Arlen had, indeed, recovered something of her youth, but to a more marked degree had Phyllis achieved maturity. The attractive girl had had her little problems, but they had been of cartilaginous structure. She had bruised easily and painfully, but repair was prompt and complete. She had never seen a compound fracture of lime-hardened bones. Not until now, Miss Arlen had not uncovered her scars with a morbid wish to shock, or a self-pitying bid for commiseration.

With cool unconcern she had exposed her irreparable injuries, and Phyllis had grown almost to full stature at the sight. She had even ventured to offer a possible remedy.

The disclosure had come about naturally enough. They had been strolling through the Cathedral grounds at Salisbury on a brown-and-gold mid-October afternoon.

Her Tragedy

"I'm not unwilling to tell you. It is quite a long story, though." Pat deliberated a suitable beginning. After a moment's reflection with averted eyes, she said calmly, "He fell in love with my sister."

Phyllis winced and gave a quick little breath of pained surprise, but offered no comment, for it was to be quite a long story and she must not interrupt. She waited, with startled eyes.

"That's all," said Pat, in the same tone Phyllis had often heard her use when dismissing a class. "That's all—except that the invitations were out and the presents were coming in—and I found them in each other's arms when I came down to the library to show him my new traveling suit—and my favorite brother fought him and was hurt—and I ran away where they couldn't find me for ever so long—and they were married, and there are children I have never seen—and my mother lives with them—and all my people are in the same town—and I can't go home."

"Oh—my dear!" sympathized Phyllis. "How can you bear it?"

"I can't," replied Pat woodenly. "That's the trouble. The effort to bear it has frozen me."

"But you aren't Pat!" Phyllis brightened hopefully. "I never felt so close to anyone, outside my own family."

Pat sighed, smiled wistfully and nodded.

"I know, dear. I have been very selfish, warming myself at your bright fire. I'm surprised it hasn't chilled you. It really has been a Godsend to me—much more than you realize."

"I do wish you could talk with my mother," she said, searching the heavy eyes with loyal concern. "She has helped so many people. You'd be surprised."

"Nothing would help me, Phyllis, but utter forgetfulness of it all. Your mother couldn't help me to that, however kindly she might try."

"But that's just it!" exulted Phyllis. "She does it! It's something our Dean taught her when my little brother was drowned. I was only a baby then, so my mother has always had it, ever since I can remember."

"I'm not religious—not the least bit."

"Oh—but neither is he!"

"Don't be silly!" laughed Pat.

"I mean—this thing that I'm thinking about isn't religion; heaps bigger and more important than that. I'll try to tell you. But it won't be easy. You see—I've never been hurt. You have to be, I think, before it means very much.

Phyllis Talks

"Perhaps I could qualify," said Pat dryly. "Let's have it."

For more than two hours they sat on the grey stone bench at the entrance to the cloister. Phyllis was conscious, all the time, that she was making a very poor job of it; and when, at last, her vague ideas were exhausted, an extended silence meant nothing other than that Pat had remained unconvinced and unstirred.

"I think you get just a flash of it," pursued Phyllis, unwilling to surrender—"not the real essence of it, of course, but just a faint glimpse, among these old things we've been seeing lately. I've thought about it, a lot.

"Remember the other day when we were down at Saint Olave's, sitting there in the dusky gloom, looking up at the bust of Elizabeth Pepys? And you had just been talking about all she and Sam had been through; the London fire, the plague, the smashup of two governments, the frights, the flights, the shocks, the sorrows; and there she was, so calm, so secure; and — outside in the street—you could hear it pouring in through the open door—the dull mutter and rumble of traffic mumbling, 'On, on, on, on' —and you could hear the measured plop-plop of big shaggy hoofs on the cobblestone?

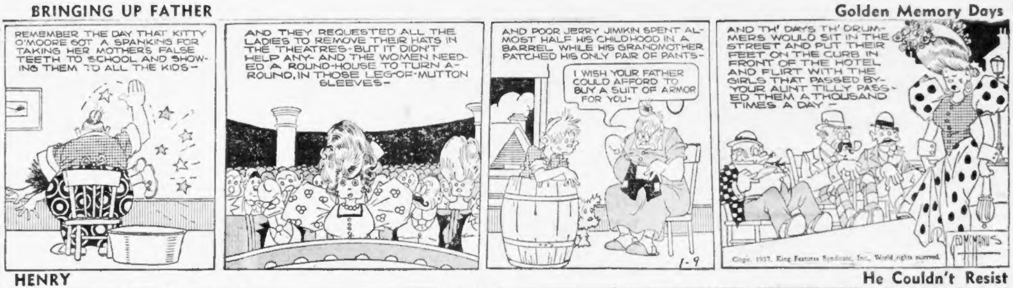
BRINGING UP FATHER

Golden Memory Days



REMEMBER THE DAY THAT KITTY O'MOORE GOT A SPANKING FOR TAKING HER MOTHERS FALSE TEETH TO SCHOOL AND SHOWING THEM TO ALL THE KIDS—
AND THEY REQUESTED ALL THE LADIES TO REMOVE THEIR HATS IN THE THEATRES-BUT IT DIDN'T HELP ANY- AND THE WOMEN NEEDED A ROUND-HOUSE TO TURN AROUND, IN THOSE LEG-OF-MUTTON SLEEVES-
I WISH YOUR FATHER COULD AFFORD TO BUY A SUIT OF ARMOR FOR YOU-

AND TH' DAYS TH' DRUMMERS WOULD SIT IN THE STREET AND PUT THEIR FEET ON THE CURB IN FRONT OF THE HOTEL AND FLIRT WITH THE GIRLS THAT PASSED BY- YOUR AUNT TILLY PASSED THEM A THOUSAND TIMES A DAY—

Cohan in "Fulton of Oak Falls" will continue for its second and final week at the Plymouth . . . The departing shows are "Frederika," which goes on to Washington; "Jane Eyre" and Katharine Hepburn leave the Colonial after two weeks of phenomenal business . . . His work with Miss Hepburn in her newest play is credited with lifting her several notches in the acting ratings . . . Charlie Pearlman is now boss of the Hotel Lafayette's cocktail lounge.

EXCLUSIVE: The G-men are deploying in and about Barnstable County . . . If their suspicions are founded on fact, a Page 1 story will come out of the Cape in the near future . . .

Pro Tennis Promoters Bag the Boodle by Hiding Vine's Illness

AUSTEN LAKE

I FIND MYSELF PONDERING WHETHER the promoters of the professional tennis show at Madison Square Garden [illegible] can be had up for consp'racy, in one of its several degrees, for having con[illegible] the state of Ellsworth Vines [illegible] succumbed to Fred Perry, the remodeled British amateur. The house scaled $58,000 of which the promoters took down approximately $23,000 or 40 per cent, after meeting all cash obligations, including $18,500 to Perry and $7500 to Vines.

The promoters' obligation did [illegible] customers who had [illegible] due to [illegible] Vines' legs [illegible] Vines diag[illegible] afterwards as a case [illegible] good. He [illegible] several days before [illegible] equatorial [illegible] and [illegible] given a much [illegible] and he hoped that [illegible] the same [illegible] at the same [illegible]

They Drenched Vines With Pain Killer

THE ADVANCE SALE FOR PERRY'S PROFESSIONAL debut was a grand, colossal sell-out. So the impresarios, horrified at the prospect of refunding all that lovely money, nursed Vines in his hotel room, dosed him with syrups and roused him just before the evening's business. He was weak and tottery. But in obedience to the rather heroic professional rule, "The show must go on," they trundled him in just as the spotlight was searching the mouth of the player's tunnel and the band was blurting the first strains of the national anthem.

He Was Raised in a Spartan School

VINES, OF COURSE, WAS REARED IN THE rigid school of amateur tennis where, in pain or health, the athletes of both sexes are denied the right to quit, or any of the gentle and generous considerations which are extended to the amateur football players at Harvard and Princeton, or even the boxing amateurs in the Golden Gloves. The most notable example in our time was that of Mrs. Moody, when she was Miss Helen Wills, at the moment of walking out midway in her match with her Berkeley, Cal., neighbor at Forest Hills in September of 1933.

[illegible] Jacobs had had her satisfaction.

Whither Am I Drifting?

By this time I seem to have put such an effective headlock on myself that I don't know how to let go. Because here I am arguing, to the detriment of my original argument, that the tennis customers who denied the right of the amateur invalids to quit a major league match at Forest Hills are in no position to screech when a professional invalid gets out of bed in a hot sweat and insists on filling another major league match at the Madison Square Garden. This, of course, is on the theory that the tennis people, being a distinct social group, were one and the same in both places.

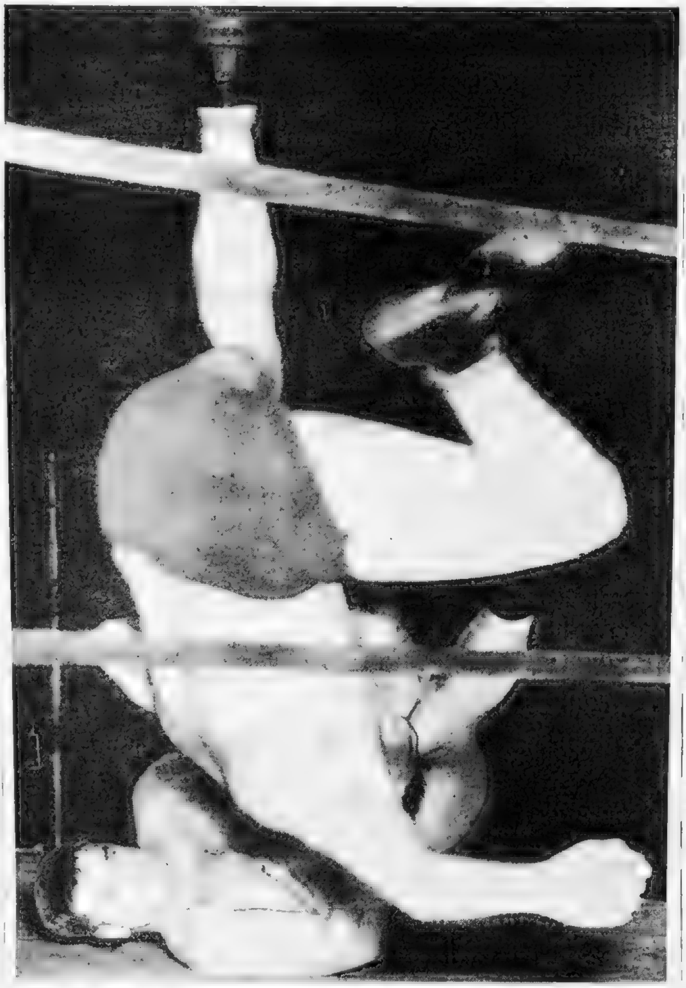
DANNO TAUGHT HIGHLAND FLING



THESE RIDES DIDN'T DO Danno any good. Here is O'Mahony flying through the air as Clark spun him with his legs. Danno traveled as far as ten feet sometimes when Clark would brace himself on the mat and push his feet against Danno's chest sending him flying. Clark beat O'Mahony.

Danno's Irish Whip Fails to Daunt Invader

By SAM COHEN

[illegible]

[illegible] said Clark when Paul Bowser, wrestling promoter, dared to venture the remark that he had yet to beat the world's champion, Yvon Robert, and he was a little peeved [illegible] with his critics.

"If Danno held the world's title then I can lick every blasted wrestler you can dig up, including Robert, Steve Casey and the rest of them. And if you (the fiery and cocky Scotchman turned on me) don't think so, then you name the man that can beat me and I'll make Bowser sign him for a match."

O'Mahony had a powerful hold on Clark but the Scotchman set himself and lifted O'Mahony off the floor, flinging him onto the ropes with amazing power.

However, Clark couldn't stay hold Danno back for an hour because the fight and strength were all gone out of the Irishman after he landed on his head. Danno's famous Irish [illegible]

It is my earnest wish that such contributions shall be continued. With the help of the newspaper and of the other sports-controlling bodies I see no reason why the year 1937 should not be the greatest in the history of the A. A. U.

AMATEUR Tilt Rules CHANGED

EFFECTIVE THIS YEAR

New York, Jan. 9 (AP)—The United States Golf Asociation today abandoned its all-match play system for its national amateur championship, effective with the 1937 tournament, and returned its former order of qualifying tests.

Under a new revised order in the national amateur, sectional qualifying trials will be held as usual but the field will be forced to qualify over two 18-hole rounds at the scene of the championship, reducing the field for match play to 64.

Before the [illegible] form of a match play system was placed in effect with the 1934 championship, the qualifying test reduced the field to 32. [illegible] the revised order will [illegible] the wild stampede but give twice as many qualifying berths as before.

BUDGET SIDELIGHTS

Debt Cut SEEN AS Possible

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The Boston financial district, in common with others the country over, occupied itself late yesterday and today speculating as to whether or not the end of the American reflationary period is in sight.

The President's budget message to Congress contained more than a hint that reflation, or deficit financing, was almost completed.

A [illegible] expenditures [illegible] for the fiscal year ending in June 1938 [illegible]. The [illegible] of the Wall Street Journal [illegible] if forecasts are fulfilled the Treasury's cash receipts from all sources may exceed [illegible] expenditures by as much as $[illegible]. This excess obviously will be available for the purchase of government securities in the open market. The [illegible] may come this year [illegible] be made. But since the Social Security [illegible] receipts from [illegible] will have been in excess of this amount the treasury may [illegible] the money for the purchase of special obligations.

* * *

While it is too early to make an attempt to assess the actual effects of the above on credit and money conditions it does seem advisable to consider the possible repercussions. The result will be to reduce the volume of governments available to investors, thus leaving the field open to private issues. And at the same time reflation of bank deposits resulting from deficit financing will end and Treasury purchases of its own securities in the open market will operate to diminish bank deposits. To our way of looking at the matter now the effect on credit and money conditions depends on which of these two opposite results wields the balance of power. So we will devote much attention in coming weeks to solving the question of whether or not the loss of investment mediums is far is not more than offset by reductions in bank money.

* * *

Notebook: Finally, in regard to the above, will private loan demand take up the slack if the loss of investment mediums is missed . . . Or will it accentuate the credit position if the loss of deposits proves the more important . . . The estimate of Holly Sugar earnings for 1936 is one of the most encouraging we have heard on any member of the group . . . It calls for per share net of about $6 . . . Which suggests the stock is attractive at current levels . . . Hejay Stores, recent newcomer in the big curb, is expected to show between $1.70 and $1.80 per share for last year . . . With $2.50 thought to be a likely 1937 figure.

* * *

The market is likely to develop into a specialty affair with a break here and there given a fillip. The appearance of [illegible] strength should be preserved if this is the final phase of important distribution and we should expect the industrial average to work to a new peak. Using the Dow-Jones index as a guide a high of about 189 is possible. But close analysis should reveal that [illegible] stocks joined in the new upswing. Accordingly we suggest considerable care in the making of new commitments. Rails are in a good position and could work higher in support of industrials but we do not expect a new high by this group. Steels are having what appears to be their final fling, as their custom has been in so many previous culminating stages of an intermediate advance.

* * *

Ticker Ticks: Among the stocks we like in here include White Motors . . . Also if Anaconda touches 66¼ it should be good for a turn . . . The same is true of General Electric and Texas Corp. and, strangely enough, at the same price . . . Celanese has the news with it . . . From both a price and volume viewpoint . . . So it should have no excuses for failing to improve . . . Stone & Webster has had a sparkling move and profit taking seems in order . . . One of the better New York services thinks Douglas Aircraft is still in a poor technical position . . . and suggests short sales at 76 if that price is reached . . .

RETAIL FOOD Costs Increase

Retail food costs advanced 0.5 per cent between November 17 and December 15, Bureau of Labor Statistics reported.

The food cost index for December 15 was 8[illegible] per cent of the 1923-25 average, 1.2 per cent above the level of the like period last year and 28.[illegible] per cent above the level of Dec. 15, 1932.

The upward movement of wholesale commodity prices which began early in November continued during the week ended January 2 advancing 0.7 per cent, the Bureau of Labor Statistics announced.

PROFIT Taking Limits GAINS

TRADING AT HEAVY PACE

New York, Jan. 9—The rise in stocks slowed down in today's two-hour session, as profit taking attracted by the sharp upswing in the two previous sessions limited gains to modest fractions.

Trading was at a heavy pace from the opening gong, with the ticker falling two minutes behind at one time. Sales in the first hour totaled 710,000 shares, the most for a Saturday in some time.

Steels were leaders on a brisk rally reflecting expectations of large-size orders as a result of the tremendous armament budget, lifting Bethlehem, U. S. Steel and Vanadium to new 1936-37 peaks.

Motor shares were somewhat inclined at the start but slipped back to around their previous closing late in the session.

Sugars were featured by a jump of 2 points by South Porto Rico into new high ground. Miami and Inspiration in the coppers were at new tops on gains of about a point. Oils and aviations along with rails and utilities were generally steady to slightly higher.

International Agricultural Chemical issues continued features, the common rising a point to 7⅞ and the preferred almost 3 points, both reaching their best prices for the past year and more.

Current Topics

Despite labor tie-ups in the automotive field, holders of these shares noted with satisfaction that production of new cars this week was up sharply from the preceding period. The New Year's holiday, however, affected the comparison.

Also the Automobile Manufacturers' Association announced factory sales of members in December established a new record for the month.

Some companies were said to be selling unusually large quantities of ship plates abroad for naval and merchant marine purposes.

Construction material stocks received attention on reports residential building in January will show much improvement over the 1936 month. Mild weather along the Atlantic Seaboard permitted contractors to extend operations.

The French franc was off [illegible] of a cent at 4.67¼ cents at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions, and sterling was unchanged at $4.91⅝.

McLellan Stores

McLellan Stores Co. declared a dividend of 75 cents on the common, payable January 23 to stock of record January 18. On Nov. 1, 1936 an initial dividend of 20 cents was paid.

Another item of importance is the strong hint in the current issue of the Federal Reserve bulletin that the governors intend to raise member bank reserve requirements.—G. M.-P. Murphy & Co.

Friday leadership rotated from utilities to steels, to coppers, to motors, to aviations and to rails without much reason. It looks like a temporary buying climax, the sequel to which should be at least some sort of a setback.—H. D. Comer—Paine, Webber & Co.

Strength in many commodities has created a feeling of optimism toward numerous stocks which are more or less closely allied in their production.—Elmer H. Bright & Co.

A consolidation of the rapid and extensive gains already registered would appear a reasonable expectation in the near future. Hence, we are tempering our enthusiasm toward the buying side of the market from what it was at the start of the week.—J. E. Molloy, Hornblower & Weeks.

MORE GOV'T

Business IS VITAL Need

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service

New York, Jan. 9—President Roosevelt's emphasis on the desirability of modernization and improvement of the administrative machinery of the Federal Government is equally applicable to state and local units.

After the war, when individualism was still the slogan of the day, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States used to battle for "less government in business and more business in government."

The campaign for "less business in government" was hardly successful, but under Mr. Roosevelt's leadership the second part of the platform, namely, "more business in government," may be fulfilled.

Competent private business is perpetually analysing costs, and seeking to eliminate waste and needless activity. If something of this attitude could be carried over into the realm of government, an enormous service would be rendered the nation.

As government takes on added financial responsibilities, including Social Security, it should undertake to absorb part of the cost through heightening efficiency in carrying on regular activities.

* * *

In addressing himself to this problem, Henry F. Long, commissioner of corporations and taxation in the State of Massachusetts, remarked:

"If one could but discover what part of the human system should be touched in order that there may be an awakening and manifestation of interest in government similar to that which obtains in private business, a step of the greatest importance in the inducement of a higher degree of governmental efficiency would be secured."

Getting this generalization down to brass tacks, Commissioner Long applied his viewpoint to archaic methods of assessing general property taxes.

"The introduction," he said, "of modern methods of office procedure in the assessment of taxes is accomplished only against the pressure to continue the ancient practices, and many still seek and obtain through lack of interest of others favored treatment in tax assessment, thereby unfairly shifting the burden from one body of people to another and ultimately bringing dissatisfaction to all.

"The individual himself through government seeks in respect to private activity an accounting constantly as to those matters which affect him. His gas and water are metered.

"He is very sharp to demand that the rate he pays for them shall be determined under the best, newest and most approved methods, but so far as his government is concerned, which is infinitely more important to him, there appears to be no such manifestation of anxiety, and as a result improvement in assessment methods moves very slowly toward even an approach to intelligent, let alone scientific results.

"The property tax, although it is the main support of that branch of government which is the closest to the people and supplies revenue to support the activities closest to the home, appears upon even a casual survey to have the least scientific attention whether it be in respect to methods of valuation or manner of levy."

* * *

Achievement of greater efficiency in the business of government involves a better philosophy of civil service. It entails not only substituting the merit system of political favoritism, but also a device for keeping older bureaucrats on their toes by bringing them into competition with eager outsiders.

* * *

Marketwise, there is some discussion as to whether General Motors' labor trouble will inure to the benefit of its competitors. Any advantages gained by competitors will prove ephemeral.

Business and finance welcomed the plea of Senator James Hamilton Lewis, Democratic whip, for politics and business to live harmoniously together. He argued against retarding recovery with needless spirit of experimentation with new legislation.

$35 PAYMENT By Otis Co.

In line with action taken by stockholders in authorizing a reduction in the par value of the common capital stock from $80 to $45 a share, Otis Co. will pay a dividend of $35 per share on January 20 to stock of record January 13.

Before the distribution of $35 a share is made, certificates must be surrendered to New England Trust Co., transfer agent, for stamping to reflect the reduction and distribution.

"CEASE AND DESIST"

Order TO FURNITURE Dealers

Washington, Jan. 9 (INS) — The Federal Trade Commission today ordered the Retail Furniture Dealers' Association of St. Louis, its officers, and 26 merchant members, all of St. Louis and East St. Louis, Ill., to "cease and desist" from certain unfair trade practices in the interstate sale of furniture and allied products, including electric refrigerators and radios.

The commission said these practices have tended toward the creation of a monopoly and have restrained competition, increasing cost of furniture and allied products.

Respondents are specifically prohibited from entering, maintaining or attempting to put into effect certain policies, standards, sales methods and practices held to be in restraint of trade. Among these are:

Changing the Calendar

The Human Side of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

We have swung into a new year with a new set of problems and perplexities clotted to the old. Europe's major problem is the maintenance of peace despite all the provocations for war.

America's major problem is the restoration to useful, self-sustaining work of probably ten million men and women. Let those two great problems be solved and the prayers of His Holiness, the Pope, delivered with a supreme effort of his failing energies, will be answered as nearly as great human problems can be solved in the earthly life.

If Europe can win an era of peace and America can win an era of general employment in unhampered industry then I think this troubled world will be nearer to happiness than it has been for many a decade. But there are a multitude of lesser problems, and one of these has to do with the reform of the calendar year.

The Episcopal General Convention has adopted resolutions favoring a general calendar shake-up, and particularly the stabilization of Easter, which religious organizations throughout the world have been trying to get back on the temporal gold standard for a long time.

The Universal Christian Council has taken the same action. The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ of America reported agreement some time ago on calendar reform by the three branches of the Christian Church, Catholic, Protestant and Greek Orthodox. Calendar changes usually have originated with religious groups. But there is now an increasing lay activity, busy and organized, interested in making, or trying to make, the work year a little more shipshape without any ravelings or loose ends.

In the United States there are more than 100 firms operating with a 13-month year. They include the Motion Picture News, the American Agriculturist, the Barrington Associates, the B. G. Sandwich shops and the Hotel New Yorker. The advantage of four clean-cut weeks in a month, with no overhang, is felt in magazine publishing. In the simplification of accounting and bookkeeping, the reformers make a plausible case.

But there is by no means an agreement that the 13-month year offers the solution. Opposition remains powerful. The 12-months plan provides that the first month of each quarter—January, April, July and October—shall have 31 days and all other months 30, with 91 days in each quarter. The extra day at the end of the year would be a holiday. In Leap Year, there would be an additional holiday immediately after June 30th.

Nazi Germany takes calendar reform very seriously. Herr Hitler strongly favors the 12-month, as against the 13-month plan. An odd toss of chance here may turn history to a new time accounting. In 1919 Hitler was the seventh man to join the German Workers' Party which finally lifted him to power. This experience gave him high esteem for the number seven, and regard for the potency of numbers in general, with an equal dislike for the number 13.

So in Germany it has been thumbs down on the 13-month year, but the Germans, in their usual workmanlike manner propose to make a thorough job of these calendar changes and to change the names of the months as well, in accordance with the pagan, Nordic backdrop of Germany today.

America's Real Loophole in Neutrality

THE AMERICAN government is finding itself increasingly embarrassed by revelation of its own participation in acts menacing American neutrality.

There is ample evidence that the war materials dealers now being excoriated by the government, and properly so, HAVE BOUGHT MUCH OF THEIR MATERIALS FROM THE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT.

The government has been extremely critical of munitions makers for the part they play in commercializing war perils.

It has been justifiably critical of munitions dealers and war materials junkmen for their recent activities in selling supplies to Spanish war factions.

But the undeniable fact appears that the government itself is often a party to the transactions it criticizes.

THE sale and shipment of munitions to warring countries, recognized as placing the peace of America in jeopardy, traces back with startling regularity TO ACTS OF OUR OWN GOVERNMENT.

The Hearst newspapers have repeatedly pointed out the FATAL POSSIBILITIES that adhere to American munitions disposal policy.

It actually presents the possibility that such American materials may be used AGAINST AMERICANS in some future war.

Various incidents bear out the fact that the government is a party to many of the most flagrant diversions of war materials to foreign countries.

The instance comes to light of the sale of a gun-boring lathe to the Japanese government for $2,000. This lathe originally cost the American government $20,000, and was sold to a dealer for $215.33.

Rolling kitchens once used by the American Army are in use by, or en route to, Spain.

Metal experts are especially alarmed by DEPLETION OF THE AMERICAN SUPPLY OF TIN, none of which is produced in this country.

There have been instances where the government has repurchased materials, such as airplane motors, at substantial prices from junk dealers to whom they had been sold by the government at fractional figures.

CERTAINLY the situation suggests the utter lack of wisdom in the policy governing the disposition of obsolete war stocks.

The American government must make certain that none of its discarded war weapons or materials are sold into channels leading to warring nations.

Particularly vital to the American people is assurance that these materials do not fall into the hands of any nation that might ultimately use them in FIGHTING AMERICANS.

Bostonians, Keep Out!

BOSTON seamen, their lives apparently for sale, are reported signing up for service with the so-called Spanish "Loyalist" Government, and the American Government is said to be prepared to stop them.

THE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT SHOULD STOP THEM. THE SOONER THE BETTER.

Consequently, no individual that enjoys the protection of our flag has any right to involve himself, or us, in any foreign conflict.

The Mission To Japan

AN American delegation of textile men, New Hampshire Manufacturer Harvey Kent among them, tours Japan, inspects numerous cotton mills, and receives tremendous ovations.

Excellent and quite natural, these ovations; nobody insults a best customer—certainly not the shrewd Japanese that dump hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of coolie-made goods into Best Customer America every year.

No doubt, crossing the Pacific and spending weeks in Japan, Mr. Kent and his associates have good intentions. And, probably, they sincerely believe they can help jobless Americans by negotiating trade agreements and compromises with the Japanese.

But to many Americans their procedure will seem somewhat roundabout, rather like a Bostonian's circling South America to reach San Francisco.

The simpler way to aid American cotton mills, and surely the more effective, would be to go to Washington, fight for ADEQUATE tariffs and then visit Japan.

"YES" Will Always Conquer "NO"

The "fresh kid" may get a fall, a bad one—but it's better to get a bad fall from having tried than to get fat and soft from living a safe life because you never tried.

All young men get a steady diet of "NO." That is probably good for them, certainly it will not be changed until human nature is changed.

When you tell somebody, perhaps your father, that you want to dive off Brooklyn Bridge, and he strongly advises you, "NO, don't be a young fool!"—that is good advice, you would be a young fool if you did not take it.

But when a father or a boss says to a young man: "Don't waste your time asking questions about things you can't understand until you are older" . . . that is poor advice.

As young David met and defeated the giant Goliath with his sling-shot, so can other young men defeat a giant "NO" with a well-aimed "YES."

Curiosity plus "crust" will bring much trouble for a young man, also the best possible education—that which comes from EXPERIENCE.

Experience will teach a young man as he grows up, which "NO" should be listed to, and which "NO" should be knocked down with a well-aimed, hard-thrown "YES"

Because they are fond of the particular young man, want to shelter him, keep him out of trouble;

Or because they secretly hate to admit that some day they must turn over the reins to this younger man.

But the first reason, based on affection, presents a problem that few young men ever solve. No young man likes to start a fight with his father, or his boss—though often fathers and bosses secretly admire and respect young men who fight against being held back by "apron strings."

No hard and fast rule can be made for "cutting the apron strings" of affection and desire to protect the young. Wise parents, wise bosses cut the "apron strings" themselves. But not all parents and bosses are that wise. Then young men must cut themselves loose.

The greatest lesson a young man can learn is when to say "YES"—not the grovelling "yes, sir," of a milktoast yes-man, but the determined "YES" that knocks aside every "NO" that would hold him back from what he wants.

And only by action and audacity can a young man learn that lesson of when to say "YES."

Turning professional was no reflection on Jesse Owens; all who know him know that there never was a harder fighting, cleaner athlete, or a better sportsman, win or lose.

He turned "pro" because he had to make money. These two pictures show you one way that he makes money.

His clever manager thought up this stunt—a race between Owens and "Julio Caw," a race horse, as the special feature of the opening of International Sports Week in Havana, Cuba.

Because the race was as "different" as would be a fight between a gorilla and Joe Louis, people flocked to see the contest. Jesse Owens outran the horse, made much money.

But Jesse Owens has more than muscular legs; his professors will tell you that he was an able student, could have climbed high in medicine or law.

He make a mistake by using up his energy to run faster than a horse. Anybody can travel faster in a $100 second-hand automobile.

Jesse Owens and all intelligent young athletes should use their muscular legs only to carry them to work at some job where they can use their BRAINS.

Owens won, but he could have travelled much faster in a car.

Listen, World! -:- -:- By Elsie Robinson

So he's done it! Abdicated.

Chucked his job . . . passed up his family . . . gone into exile from the land he loved and the people who saw in him the answer to their desperate prayer.

And now many will be sneering at him . . . calling him quitter and fool . . . saying he was "just a playboy" who couldn't take it."

Maybe so. But I wonder how many of us have the right to judge him—particularly here in youth-mad America? How many of us aren't tempted to "abdicate" when the gray hairs come and Life tells us to cut out the patty-cakes and get on to our job?

Legend has it that we Americans were once an adult outfit, with little use for infantile frolics. But Legend had better take another look!

WE DEMAND YOUTH

Nowhere in the civilized world have grown-ups gone as ga-ga in these United States. Nowhere does the average citizen, male and female, know less about, care less for, serious affairs of state. We're all too busy being young!

Youth isn't a time of life to Americans—it's a disease!

WE WANT TO BE YOUNG . . . AND STAY YOUNG . . . AND GOD HELP ANYONE WHO TRIES TO MAKE US QUIT OUR FUNNING AND BE OUR AGE!

Of all mortals, we Americans have the greatest horror of maturity . . . the liveliest contempt for its demands . . . the least regard for its dignity.

Our "American standard of living" offers us but one desirable role for our personal life—that of callow, romantic Youth. If the man can no longer "make the team" . . . if the woman can no longer "have affairs" . . . their gong has sounded.

Observe the billions spent on beautification and rejuvenation, sports and amusements. All for what? Nothing? There's no sadder sight than an old horse trying to cut young capers. And whom does it fool? Nobody—not even the horse itself.

Mind you, I hold no brief for fallen arches, sagging jowls, varicose veins and the other symbols of approaching dotage. But, at their worst, these handicaps are infinitely less tragic than the spectacle we make of ourselves in trying to avert them.

BUT WHAT OF IT?

Happiness does not depend on the number of our years but on the quality of our imagination.

Could any royal blight or burden, even including a daily Baldwin, be tougher to take than the fate which awaits David and his lady, in their struggle to remain "A Couple of Kids?"

Those mornings when she'll gaze, terrified, into her mirror, wondering . . . You can duck a Bishop or dodge a Premier, but you can't outsmart Old Mister Time. Try as you will, that old boy always has your number.

DON'T BE AFRAID TO GROW UP! DON'T REFUSE TO BE YOUR AGE! DON'T ABDICATE YOUR THRONE WHEN IT AT LAST ARRIVES!

Take it, with all that it implies—greater responsibility, harder work, heavier risk. But remember also, that these are the price one pays for power! Pay that price! Use that power! KEEP THAT THRONE!

That's That -:- By Bruce Gustin

Prancing around with a chip on one's shoulder and daring anybody to knock it off seems to be the most popular pastime in Europe these days. Every nation appears to be looking for trouble. Even a royal romance is seized upon as an excuse for international bickering.

The course of true love ran smoothly for Crown Princess Juliana of Holland and Prince Bernhard Zu Lippe-Biesterfeld of Germany until international complications, based upon national jealousies, developed on the eve of their wedding. Nazis complained because the Dutch failed to display German flags and play the German national anthem at prenuptial festivities in Holland. The Dutch became peeved because Germany held up the passports of some of the relatives of the bridegroom. When the German national anthem and Nazi marching song finally were played in the Hague, Jewish residents stayed away from the festivities as a protest against Nazi anti-Jewish activities.

Nations, the same as individuals, are easily insulted when they are looking for insults. The easiest thing to find in this world is trouble. The man who seeks trouble usually finds to his sorrow there are any number of people eager to accommodate him.

In personally delivering his message to Congress Wednesday, President Roosevelt followed the precedent set by Woodrow Wilson. In explanation of his personal appearance before Congress, Wilson told that body:

"I am very glad indeed to have this opportunity to address the two Houses directly and to verify for myself the impression the President of the United States is a person, not a mere department of the governing hailing Congress from some isolated island of jealous power, sending messages, not speaking naturally and with his own voice; that he is a human being trying to cooperate with other human beings in a common service."

It is a good thing not to forget the human element in government. After all, electing a man President or a member of Congress does not deify him. He remains a man. The quality of government necessarily depends upon the quality of the men interested with its administration.

The race between Congress to lay an embargo on the export of munitions to Spain, and dealers to load shipments of planes, rifles, machine guns and ammunition before those can be prohibited is not a pretty spectacle. But it calls attention to the difficulties of maintaining a policy of strict neutrality when there is profit in supplying combatants who are too busy fighting to provide their own supplies.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Jan. 9—Purely personal piffle. If any American tops Chief Justice Hughes for dignity, he's escaped my eye. A fellow who carries his grandpa's hunting case watch somehow inspires my confidence. No popular song duo has taken the place of Van and Schenck.

I know a gentleman of 74 who had high blood pressure since he was 21 and is the life of the party. When I pass that Japanese art store Yamanaka's on the avenue I can't stop saying it. All of Gus Edward's kid actors grew up to talk alike.

A yarn they tell about Brooks Atkinson, the critic: Looking out a ship port hole returning from Russia, he suddenly exclaimed to his wife: "Don't look now but I think this is Finland." I won $11 in the first poker game and have an unbroken record of never winning afterward.

Definition of a Shylock: A loan wolf. Jack Pearl's philosophy: To be known as a "regular guy." Absurd what a let-down most of us have after feeling a stranger's calling card and finding it not engraved. Most widely traveled lady I know: Hattie Belle Johnston.

For oblivion: Rodeos, until performers risking their necks are decently paid. Dandy radio sermons: Those by the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick. It was only after visiting the homes of Bach, Lizt and Beethoven I ever had the slightest interest in classical music. A popular tune of which I never tire: "I Love Louisa." How we smiled when glum Brock Pemberton left a $40-a-week job on the Evening Mail to become a theatrical producer. Now look!

Newspaper stuff: The first time I ever sat at a press table was to hear a Samuel Gompers speech in Dayton, O. And did I take notes! The biggest story ever covered was the arrival of the Carpathia with the Lusitania survivors. And my city editor, R. E. MacAlarney, insists today it wasn't a bad job. My briefest newspaper job was on the City News in Chicago for 48 hours. Two days and I got the gate. Newspapers on which I tried to work and failed: The Kansas City Star and the Chicago Daily News. The most picturesque of city editors—E. Jesse Conway. Swiftest thinking managing editor—Ray Long. And the most accomplished reporter—Alfred Segal.

Memory: The day my sister took me to have my curls lopped and how she cried all the way home. Just a Little Lord Fauntleroy! Not long afterward I began taking mandolin lessons. Slick add up of Noel Coward by Richard Watts, Jr. "The gay malice of a darling wit." Suggestion for radio announcement: "Here's Edward Everett Horton all atwitter." Among newspaper writers admired and never met: Bill Corum, Walter Lippman and John McClain.

With a million the first order would be: Sedgwick, a two oz. jar of Beluga caviar with my soup nightly! If I had my choice I'd curtsy to Clare Luce for the next waltz. Edna Ferber's niece is in a current play and you'd think she was Edna 20 years ago. Hollywood is doing the usual—putting a good performer like Bing Crosby in too many shows. Ryley Cooper, rebuffed as a cub reporter at Columbia University, lectured there recently.

The first playwright I ever knew was Eugene Walter. He left our newspaper broke, returned in two years later with spats, malacca stick, fur-collared coat and a wife who was a star, Charlotte Walker. The next six months every bird on the staff was secretly writing a play. My maternal grandfather ate a light breakfast with three kinds of meat at 7:30. Memorable sundown walk: From Barbizon to Fontainbleu. Almost every fellow would like to look like Clark Gable in a turtle-neck sweater.

Cheeriest sound: A rooster crow at dawn. Saddest: The toll of school bells on a rainy day. Nobody tops Burton Holmes describing far away places. The most charming people I ever met have often been found among the worthless. A scrappy quality about Mayor La Guardia that makes him a lot of fun to watch. Bantam rooster stuff. Overheard: "I love to lunch at the Algonquin. It's such a self-conscious place."

Puppy pastel: He sat amid a spread of excelsior, a wistful lop-eared Scottie, the last pup in the 48th street window. Seeming to say: "All the others have found a good home, but I guess I'm too ugly." So he frolicked awhile and moseyed to a corner for dejected squat.

A lady, caparisoned in expensive furs, came along, stopped, gazed awhile, walked away, came back, went in and came out with the Scottie on a leash. I had an urge to tell her:
